Info on CB Amplifiers

CB amplifiers and amplifiers that are directly usable by CB's are prohibited by FCC regulation and are a prohibited item under eBay's guidelines.

eBay guidelines
FCC Rules (note FCC link on ebay page).

To summarize, the FCC doesn't permit the manufacture, importation, or sale of any amplifier that can be driven by an CB radio. Specifically the requirement for any amplifier that operates between 24 and 35 MHz is that it can't be driven with less than 50 watts.

ebay's policy claims to not allow any amplifiers that operate on those frequencies NOR any amplifier listings in the CB category. It makes no differrence SUPPOSEDLY if it is claimed to be for amateur use.
ebay's policy clearly says no 24-35 amplifiers PERIOD.

The following amplifier manufacturer/models are clearly illegal:
Palomar: Just about any model but to include the models 250, 300, 350, 600, Elite, Skipper, Power
Deluxe
RM Italy: 203, KL-40, KL-60, KL-145, KL-300, KL-500
Texas Star: All models including DX250
Super Star: All models including 200.
PAL: PAL 351
SCP: SCP-100T-BIL
HME: HME HM-150
Varmint: All including XLT10
Bimbo: All including 100

The following ebay stores/powersellers specialize in breaking the law and flaunting ebay policy:
DJ ELECTRONICS

Per eBay:
CB amplifiers: The FCC does not permit the use of power amplifiers with Citizens Band radios. Therefore, eBay prohibits any listings of the following:

* CB amplifiers
* Amplifiers specified for use on the 11 Meter band
* Amplifiers designed for use in frequencies 24 MHz to 35MHz
* Amplifiers posted within the CB category
* CB Radios that are amplified to exceed 4 Watts using the AM Settings or 12 Watts using the SSB settings

Colonel????? Let me guess, the salvation army. I think the military gets their officers from schools that actually teach you things like grammar and spelling. I can see how you may have gotten confused, you rode the short bus to your special class at school and used lincoln logs and colored all day giving you plenty of time to daydream about being a colonel. I hope this paragraph was not too long for you. If you have any questions about the larger words over 5 letters long, google them.

Your a dumbass. ebay's policy consists of a disclaimer stating that the amp is not intended for use on the 11 meter band or CB frequencies. DJ Electronics is in accordance with ebay policy.

A truce implies that there is some reason to have one. You are speaking only for your own self. It is clearly seen that you are much less inclined to make threats now that you have been located and identified. Stick your truce up your royal chinese machine. AKC will ask for a truce when we decide we want one, not when a feeble minded piece of dung like you asks for it. Sorry you cant take the AKC ribbing you. You are just a thin skinned coward and punk who has shot his bolt.

What's your next movie gonna be? We heard it will be a movie about Clinton's idiocy in Somalia and will be titled "Mope Lips Down".

Identified? Haha, now that's a good one felon boi. I've told you my name and the town I live in repeatedly. You're too fucking scared of me to do anything about it.

Admittedly, a good inner life is hard to achieve, especially in is pissed becuase I (after steve threatened to kill me 7 years ago) I allowed this guy and Dave and steve to chase thier tails over calling the funny 5 sided building (and other places as well)

they are still pissed at being fooled, and indeed there febble little minds tuned those sentences in confustion beyond even my own hopes of confusing them

also pissed that I and and my father who somebody called about the threat came out and lied to them about where I could be found Steve and Dave are confused by the results

I don't know what he really designed. It appears to be a standard 12 volt amp kludged onto the back of a 12 volt power supply. Of course, he did add some kind of metering, and moved the control switches to the front of the power supply, but if that's designing, I have designed cars, computers, and of course every home I have lived in since I could push a dresser around.

I can see where that would be handy, especially at a track as big as Daytona. I think he said they would be available for rent for $50 to the fans at the track this weekend, with a purchase price of $400. Reckon they work at all the Nascar tracks?

This will be the first time I've ever rooted for a Hendrick's powered car.
Marlin in the 14 Monte! (his dads #) "mash it to the floor" ($1-Sterling)

Otherwise I'm rooting for Ryan Newman #12. Who's your driver, Jimbo?

now that steve parks is finished being a metal recycling provider and rusty & r. rudd are closing down, the 24 car is who i follow. yeah yeah yeah bust my balls about him but he is a proven winner. been following him since '95 when i was in Virginia Beach.

Hendricks is a cheater! Jimmie Johnson just got popped Sunday night! Gordon is running some sort of traction control that no one can find!! :)

He's not a bad guy, but man does he get BOOOOOOO'D at the track.

To further this, according to 47CFR95 its illegal to even have a CB

It was more fun taking the test in front of an FCC examiner and passing both the commercial telegraph and amateur extra the same day .... in 1966. Yep, and radar endorsement too ... the 1st phone was taken another week that year. I needed it for my job at WROC-TV in Rochester, NY.

After going qrt in 1972, I let my tickets lapse.

In 1993, I decided to get 'em back. No study. No QRZ.com. No Morse since 1969.

Sunuvagun! Amateur extra (20 words per minute) and found out the test was in 5 hours when I called to see who or what was giving the test - right after I decided to get back in. No study, no pain, no sweat. :)))

Didn't bother with the telegraph ticket as I knew the end was coming in a few years. Why pay the price for the exam? Of what use would it be? But I did retrieve what was left of the 1st phone - the GROL (rough equivalent of the 2nd phone years ago).

Still haven't been on cw. I tried a Java translator and found I can't do the 40 I used to be able to put on paper with perfect copy. 30 would be about it and pushing real hard unless I got on the air for a week or so. 20, however, sounded slow.

This old fart, however, wouldn't have any problems at any time. The only time I had to retest was in 1964 on the general as I had done the stupid thing of learning dots and dashes. It was tough converting to sound, but I managed and passed every exam since. The real exams.

Well it's a sentence that can be understood, but what are you calling bs?
By the way, you have to do something important to become a Kentucky Colonel.
What exactly did you do to deserve this honor. Or is this one of those lie's

Spend a couple of bucks, buy Code of Federal Regulations 47, then read part 95, as well as part 97. Then maybe.....

BTW.. the book is available through the US Government Printing Office.

Yes, the 10Kw vertical with the tophat that you find on ebay all the time, hooked up with rg8 'belden' brand (no markings on coax !)

The FCC has taken the stance that: "possession is sufficient to prove guilt".

so, even if you don't have one hooked up, you are still in violation of 47 cfr 95 et al while in possession.

Thats the way it reads in the book.

Sec. 95.410 (CB Rule 10) How much power may I use?

(a) Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the following values under any conditions:

AM (A3)--4 watts (carrier power) SSB--12 watts (peak envelope power)

(b) If you need more information about the power rule, see the technical rules in subpart E of part 95.
(c) Use of a transmitter which has carrier or peak envelope power in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the station.

Sec. 95.411 (CB Rule 11) May I use power amplifiers?

(a) You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your certificated CB transmitter in any way:
(1) External radio frequency (RF) power amplifiers (sometimes called linears or linear amplifiers); or
(2) Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
(b) There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
(c) The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external RF power amplifier if--

(1) It is in your possession or on your premises; and
(2) There is other evidence that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10, Sec. 95.410.
(d) Paragraph (c) of this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

(personal note)... as per the ops at the FCC Livermore monitoring station..... the "HAM" license "exemption" doesn't count for a CB only amplifier.

Sec. 95.421 (CB Rule 21) What are the penalties for violating these rules?

(a) If the FCC finds that you have willfully or repeatedly violated the Communications Act or the FCC Rules, you may have to pay as much as $10,000 for each violation, up to a total of $75,000. (See section 503(b) of the Communications Act.)
(b) If the FCC finds that you have violated any section of the Communications Act or the FCC Rules, you may be ordered to stop whatever action caused the violation. (See section 312(b) of the Communications Act.)
(c) If a Federal court finds that you have willfully and knowingly violated any FCC Rule, you may be fined up to $500 for each day you committed the violation. (See section 502 of the Communications Act.)
(d) If a Federal court finds that you have willfully and knowingly violated any provision of the Communications Act, you may be fined up to $10,000 or you may be imprisoned for one year, or both. (See section 501 of the Communications Act.)

So let me see if I understand. A non CBer, let's say just a reseller or electronics enthusiast is in violation of part 47 if they have a broadcast transmitter sitting in storage and don't have an amateur licence?

No, but once I made the mistake of entering a room with a bs meter running.

care then to explain the fines they have issued over the last 10 years or so to folks that were heard on the air, but were found not to have said "linears" hooked up? they still got fined.

even though 47 cfr 95 doesn't explicitly state it, if you are caught with an amp in your possession, you are as guilty as someone who uses one. end of story.

another concept you should wrap your brain around: "guilt by association".

1889. Installing CB in a 1999 Ford Ranger?

Ok, so I've been wanting a CB for a long time now and finally bought one - a Uniden PC78 Elite Bearcat, 40 channels & all the goodies you could ever want.

I've got a 1999 poor man's Ford Ranger (branded as a Mazda B-2500). Here's my trouble:

1. Electrical connection is supposed to be made to the ignition accessory connection. Don't know where that is.

2. Can't figure out the best place to mount the thing. Anybody who's been in a Ford Ranger knows they're rather cozy. Mine has a 5-speed manual, which eats up all the space over the hump up against the dash.

Anybody want to help out?

Learn how to read. Hint Look at C. (1) the word "and"

If you are deemed to of transmitted then the above rule could be enforced, but there must be evidence of transmissions.

You should just learn how to read. My previous post was about mere possession. Mere possession is not illegal.

The FCC doesn`t give a damn about someone running a box..They gave up on enforcing CB radio crap LONG ago unless they get a bunch of complaints in one specific area..You think with computers,cell systems,etc they have manpower and money to waste on some low level junk like CB radio????..Every major break held around the country is widely advertised all over the net and in every truck stop CB shop...The FCC doesn`t even have to do any investigation..A 12 year old could spend 5 minutes online and mapquest them directions right to the keydowns and still the FCC doesn`t bother wasting their time..Buy a clue

Get some #12 wire, two pieces long enough to reach to the battery, fuse BOTH wires at the battery, and use that to run the radio.
Using the ignition terminal will pick up lots of vehicle noise.

Between the seats with an external speaker? The internal ones all seem to suck.
Drill under the dash and mount with nuts and bolts. It's not a new vehicle anymore.

I use to own a 93 Ford Ranger. I never could find a suitable place in the cab to put a radio. One of the main reasons I bought my current 95 Rodeo is that it had a nice little spot right under the FM/AM for a radio to go.

I realize this doesn't help you. I thought I would share anyhow.

I have 94 Ford Ranger

I use a 10" vertical radio mount. Something like what the police use to stack mount their radio gear.

mounted between the seat and floor shift.

Actually they were adapted from some motorola tech notes. He wrote the parts list, the girls built them. These were full production units until FCC signal purity regs were instituted. They were good for heating up external low pass filters. Beleive it or not I think the company is still in business.

Yes he had a cb in his car. I don't see his call in the dbase any more.

What you fail to realize is that they need probable cause to get a search warrant to see if I have a linear. Therefore if I have one and it is not connected and I don't transmit they have no probable cause to enter.
Therefore any amp in my house IS legal.

You must be in violation of BOTH rules. I can have it as long as it is not connected and I don't transmit. LEGAL Bullshit. It must be proven to have been used or transmitted.

Agreed! It tastes much like bacon when you fry it. Works well for a camping

Hello Chicken Fried Steak:

Since your vehicle may not be chosen to go to the Paris Air Show, you might consider mounting the radio on the dash. I have done this with great success. I just throw a old towel over it in the summer.

The power connections should be routed directly to the battery. This does help reduce some noises in the power wiring.

In my old 87 Nissan I RTV'ed in a Motorola External Speaker in the upper aft corner of the cab so that I could hear it real well. No room for mounting brackets.

I mounted a 96 inch Francis Amazer Fiberglass whip antenna to the upper back part of the cab using a L bracket. I ran the coax in the floor of the cab by drilling a hole for it, and then applying Silicon RTV to seal it up. I used RG142 Coax, and made sure the coax didn't get wrapped up in the drive shaft. Had that happen ONCE!

It worked quit well.

Hope this helps.

Get one of these and you can mount it there, and have room for other stuff
too. I put one in my truck, it's handy.

It sure came in handy the last couple years right after the hurricanes ripped down power poles and electric lines here in Marion County, Florida. No electricity, roads closed and no stores open so you ate cold canned goods. i have a dozen cans already for this year's hurricane season, along with a couple large jars of peanut butter and several boxes of crackers. It was weeks before the stores had fresh fruit and vegetables, or much of anything else. :(

Hello Steveo:

A good friend I worked with who retired a few years ago, had this problem.

He had a new Dodge Diesel 1 Ton Pick Up Truck. He had bought it damaged from shipping. I looked it all over I couldn't see anything wrong with it. So he wanted a first class CB radio Installation. He being one of the worlds finest heavy equipment operators he had the cash to make things happen.

He decided to install the radio, linear amplifier, and antenna himself. After seeing all the installation I noticed the coax dangling down between the cab and pick up box. He said it shouldn't be a problem.

Well after a few short days the Drive Shaft had somehow got the coax wrapped around it and yes it pulled the coax out of the radio and antenna. But because it was the cheap RG58C Coax it didn't hurt the radio or antenna.

He said he talking to his friends and all of a sudden the radio went dead. Hehehehee.

I replaced it for him in the parking lot. I had some coax left over. We called him "The Drive Shaft"

Sec. 95.411 (CB Rule 11) May I use power amplifiers?
(a) You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your certificated CB transmitter in any way:
(1) External radio frequency (RF) power amplifiers (sometimes called linears or linear amplifiers); or
(2) Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
(b) There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
(c) The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external RF power amplifier if--
(1) It is in your possession or on your premises; and
(2) There is other evidence that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10, Sec. 95.410.
(d) Paragraph (c) of this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

Note that (d) allows Amateurs with HF privileges to posses amplifiers.

A low IF gives good selectivity but, unfortunately, puts the image frequency only a short distance away. A higher IF puts the image out of range, but is not so selective. CB, with just 10KHz spacing, needs selectivity but, with the bandwidth needed in the front-end, could have trouble rejecting an image just 910KHz away.
A dual conversion superhet CB uses the first If (10.695MHz) to put the image well out of the rx bandwidth and the second IF (455KHz) to get the desired selectivity. The image of the first IF is rejected by the front end, the image of the 2nd IF is rejected by the first
IF filter, and adjacent channels are rejected by the 2nd IF filter.
At least in theory, but too many sets have crap filters and some have crystal 1st IF filters to get selectivity at that point. British sets are now made with crystal filters in order to meet the legal requirements for adjacent channel rejection.

> So you may find stations 2x if it is not done correctly.

Somewhere in my radio collection, I have an old dual Superhet that used no 1st IF filter for receiving FM... it was straight through from the 1st mix to the second. The set picks up signals 910KHz away just as if they were on the channel it is supposed to be receiving.
I could get a filter for it, Lou does one that will work in it, but I cannot be arsed as it's an old radio.

This is what I have been saying. You are not in violation for simply owning a linear.
(1) It is in your possession or on your premises; (KEY WORD) and (KEY SENTANCE)(2) There is other evidence that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10, Sec. 95.410.
So read it and weep people. I may not be able to operate said device but I can damn sure own one.

Figures, he runs a dodge :-)

I'm rooting for Mark Martin, but Greg Biffle and Tony Stewart look like the

Did you watch Mark win the truck race last night? He had three Toyota's' on his heels when they went green, white, checker, then there was another wreck so it ended under caution.

I ran the above through a BS meter:

BS-O-METER

The only conclusion is that your comment about the BS meter was BS. =:o

I have an old (Aug 1991) 25 LTD Classic someone just gave me and it all works except it`s just factory stock in everyway and doesn`t put out worth a damn...I`ve been away from the game so long I`ve lost all my notes on the various tricks to tune it up beyond swapping out the final and driver..Clip this..change that...?...Maybe some of the old timers who remember me and know I`m cool can lend a hand..Send me an e-mail if you want to avoid the trolls who`ll turn this into an anti-keyclown thread

Hello Steveo:

Yeah I could see that coming! I have him some old water hose for running the wires thru the fire wall, which he used.

But I think the all time blooper was when my child took off with the "RED NECK" (Ford F250 4x4, 460 CI, worlds loudest Public Address System) truck loaded with teenagers going to the "The Game". The coaxes had some how got cough in the rear bumper, as it was very windy, well when they took off, down came my small antenna farm on a push-up mast. A 6 meter Interceptor 10K, a 2 meter Interceptor, two scanner antennas, and a VHF Beam.

I thought a Jumbo Jet had landed on the roof. I was so mad at the kids I told them to keep on going! They returned with a old Push up mast, and between the 3 of them and me we had the antennas back up in service in an hour.

But then it cost me the price for dinner for all of us, and a few girl friends at the local family runned "High Flutin" Restaurant. Of course we had to have the special, Lobster and Flite Menong. Not to mention word had gotten out to all the distinguished radio enthusiasts on all the bands, so now I had a few more for dinner promising not to say anything about the antennas coming down from the coax and truck. For a few drinks......

With a dinner bill of well over several hundred dollars, a good time was had by all. I could have done without the loud thud on the roof tho.

OK. I've got one on the shelf. I don't use AM only radios.
I know it works. I tried it once.

Anybody make an offer for it. Shipping would be actual postage from 212..

I should clean up this Uniden PC76XL and get that off my shelf, too.
Also a TRC-422 and a TRC-422A just sits and sits.

I'm not sure if I should sell the Regency Range Gain, Lafayette LMS-40, Midland 76-858, and forget about my 2950.

I spent good money on the LMS-40 to get it repaired because some dork had tried to put extra channels in it and had really butchered it.
I'd have to sell that one for at least $100. It's in good shape externally.

I also have a lightning struck 148GTL. The owner said it's DOA.
I'm not going to bother testing it. His A99 was toothpicks in the yard!

DONTSPAMME is every other letter in my email addy. Remove that to reply.
Serious inquiries only. Leave a phone number in the email for call back and give a time referenced to a timezone to call on my dime.

I am hearing that many guys are addeding in another modulation IC, and Modulation transformer to double the audio power, allowing a higher carrier power to be 100% modulated.

Actually the filters used in CB are adequate to meet the published specifications. They are not adequate to filter the splatter from over modulated transmitters that are the norm for current CB operations.
Also the PCB layouts also a major contribution to poor stopband attenuation needed to filter out over bloated audio from rather poor transmitted signals.

All the filtering will not help prevent adjacent channel splatter from lousy trransmitters that are highly over modulated. Then there is the compression gain of bipolar transistor mixers that are severely overloaded from someone down the street running a kilowatt amplifier.
this leads to adjacent channel splatter that even the best of filters and layout will not help.

Hello Jay:

Dang, you've got plenty coax horror stories. I never realized RG-8 made such a good lasoo'! :)

The only coax story that I have worth repeating is when I was a kid CBer back in the late 60's. I dis-connected my coax like a good boy cuz a storm was brewing on the west horizon. My dad was sitting in his easy chair in the living room when the antenna on the chimney took a hit, and the friggin' lightning strike came down the coax across my bedroom and somehow went right around my dad in the next room...then it hit his brand new curtis mathis color TV and fried it.

We were both watching the tube when it happened and he commenced to blame it on me and my CB antenna. He now admits that he didn't pay much attention to grounding my droopy-drawers 1/4 wave when he installed it, but it was like pulling teeth to get him to take any blame! :)

1997. THE THOUGHTS OF YOUR RADIO GOD K1MAN: K5LBJ (ARRL BIG PROJECT STATION) GOES "BIG TIME" WITH K1MAN

K1MAN BULLETIN - B060215B -

K5LBJ (ARRL BIG PROJECT STATION) GOES "BIG TIME" WITH K1MAN

Dateline Belgrade Lakes, Maine, USA.

K1MAN came on 14.275 MHz. after KE9RY signed with OE8ANK at 8:30 EST on Wednesday, 15 February 2006.

OE8ANK and K5LBJ were calling CQ (they apparently could not hear each other), and K1MAN answered and made contact with both stations at the same time in hopes that a three way QSO could be established. Ray, OE8ANK, said that he was in Southern Austria, and Harry, a K5LBJ High School student, said that he was in Austin, Texas. K5LBJ (in "K1MAN shock?") suddenly "froze up cold" and totally dropped out of the QSO, not responding to several calls. K1MAN then finished up with OE8ANK and called K5LBJ back again and again. N6GJR, Carl, then called in from the Dallas area for a short QSO. K1MAN signed with him and then started the IARN daily talk show since the frequency was now totally clear. Five minutes into the K1MAN talk show, Harry, K5LBJ, called K1MAN on the telephone, not to join the talk show, but to respectfully "complain" about K1MAN "taking over" "his" frequency(1). But, being delighted to have kids(2) on "my" 14.275 MHz. frequency (hi), and in the true spirit of good amateur practice, I immediately stopped the talk show in progress and turned the frequency back over to K5LBJ who then called CQ, CQ, CQ, CQ, CQ, repeatedly.

K1MAN then checked in again and tried to get a signal report and info on K5LBJ and the "ARRL School Club Roundup" which they were working. But, the kids had no interest in such "rag chewing;" they just wanted contacts, Harry said. No problem. Harry did say that they would be on for an hour. No problem. At 9:08 EST, fifteen or so minutes later, Harry said K5LBJ was going QRT. Not an hour by any stretch, but these are just kids, right? No digital clocks in the ARRL premier Big Project ham shack???? ARRL petty hobby politics???? Perhaps the kids actually believe the prevailing ARRL "party line" that K1MAN is not a duly licensed amateur radio station????

I gather K5LBJ went QRT so the kids could attend classes and study such American fundamentals of citizenship such as the United States Constitution which guarantees equal justice for all, except for K1MAN, and due process of law for everyone, except for K1MAN, hi! Perhaps some "bible study: In the beginning there was ARRL, and the Lord saw that the League was good in the Garden of Newington, etc.!"

I am truly flattered that the premier ARRL Big Project student station(3) would come to 14.275 MHz. right after the new K1MAN talk show was announced to the world. Actually, 14.275 MHz. is a very popular special event frequency, isn't it? They say that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. If you can't bring Mohammed to the mountain, bring the mountain to Mohammed, hi! K5LBJ thus went big time with K1MAN on 14.275 MHz., in the major leagues of amateur radio.

73 and GL de K1MAN

(1) First the Boy Scouts and now the kids, right? I can see another $21,000 NAL from "Rot Riley" now, can't you? Hi!

(2) Honestly, when was the last time you worked someone under age 30 on 20 meters? In fifty years of amateur radio, I could count it on one hand with the exception of when I was 20 and talking to myself, hi!

(3) Check out K5LBJ on www.QRZ.com.

That's sort of funny. You should have taken it further.

1) Thou shalt not freeband on thy amateur or assigned frequencies

2) Thou shalt use only the minimum wattage needed for contact

3) Thou shalt ignore thy critics and critiques

4) Thou shalt obeyeth the nature of mother

5) Thou shalt not covet thy contact's audio

6) Thou shalt yield thy frequency when pileups occur

7) Thou shalt promise to dx on thy regular basis

8) Remember thou's dx contesting days and keep contest days sacred

9) Thou shalt purchase at least two new pieces of radio gear per year

10) Thou shalt make more dx contacts than thy's previous year

With all the geniuses in here, I'm sure we can come up with several more gems.

The ARRL is now a political organization.
K1MAN is trying to become the new political organization.

If anyone wants to help further the cause of ARS, they should join a local club or just make a donation to a local club or

Ok lets cut the bully shit, First off K1MAN is LEGAL! until the FCC makes a FINAL ORDER on his his fined he can legally be on the air. The Fucking Asshole Radio Relay League and their little members are pushing this shit that he's operating illegally, which is not true. As for K5LBJ, they need to learn that they don't own any frequencies, and if the frequency is not being used then anyone can use it. This bull shit idea of well were sitting on the frequency, and although were not on it, were still using it, and that's what the vast majority of amateur operators are doing and this bullshit practice needs to stop.

Because it's a fact, anyone who reads the FCC rules and regulations will tell you that. I messed around enough with the FCC enough to know both in Amateur radio and in regards to pirate radio. Untill a FINAL

I am not in Defense of K1MAN.

I have been licensed since 1967 and W1AW Has always Came right on FREQ with Code practice/ Bulletins. With High power .. Never any considerstion for Who was already using the FREQ. No one at W1Aw was checking the FREQ Before Transmitting .

Why Doesn't The FCC take away the club license for W1AW ?

I sat Treat Every licensee The SAME !

Has W1Aw Cleaned their operating Practices ? (I have not turned on My HF gear since 1997) So they may have Cleared up There OWN Transmissions

Dumbass, it don't take a lawyer to read the rules. I've been active both with the FCC and the House and Senate Subcommittee on Telecommunications in regards to FCC rules and regulations and FCC abuse of their on rules and regulation. The fact is the FCC MUST issue a FINAL ORDER before FCC can actually be shut down. The FCC tried to shut down some pirate radio stations down a few years ago, but the court throw out the FCC injunction because the FCC didn't issue a Final Order. Under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) a government agency must have Administrative review of any rule or violation, in which those accused of violating the rule can raise challenges to the violation, including Constitutional ones. After the Administrative process is done the accused can appeal to the US Court of Appeal and the US Supreme Court. K1MAN was give a NAL, a NAL is not a final order, the Fucking FCC will tell you that, until a final order is issued and all his LEGAL avenues he can continue to operate his station. The FCC can go to the courts and have the courts stop him while the administrative procedure and legal process is going on, but 1. they haven't done it and 2. they have to show why it's in the public interest and what harm would be caused by him remaining an operator. I would suggest you read PART 0, Part 1 and Part 2 of the FCC rules and regulations, it don't take a fucking lawyer to read plain language rules.

Hello James:

No thats not how AM works. The Modulation increases and decreses the amptitude during Modulation. Thats how double sidband full modulation works. Look in a old ARRL Book.

The cause isn't being furthered. It's being mocked, its longevity and its use is being compromised more each day and the laws governing the service are changing to favor that of businesses who don't give a damn about the service. The cause of ARS hasn't been furthered in years This is what happens when a large segment of a group is apathetic. Of course, we all know ego and self-promotion are traits not found in such a hobby.

It does't matter what one does anymore concerning this service. The writing has been on the wall for quite some time. Some are just now bothering to realize all those words strung together make for a prophecy that has all but occurred.

Because some of the freqs. above ch 40 are military. We had a kook out here who was ripping up for three years telling the FCC to FO his doorstep and telling them they had no authority to fine him some $50K or more, but he strayed onto Military frequencies and within two weeks the FBI raided his place and trucked him and his stuff away. Looks like they will be selling his house to pay for it all.

Jay, I respectfully disagree.

An AM carrier doesn't change, just sidebands are added in the mixing (modulation) process, and the instantaneous voltage shown on an o-scope will be 4 times greater then the carrier power itself. Since the audio added is 50% of the carrier, the RMS power will be 150% of the unmodulated carrier. The peak to peak voltage is greater. Put a 1000 Hz tone on a signal and look at it on spec-an.

(make sure to do this test with an unmodified radio, "swing kits" ruin proper AM)

Is that 18 watts on 27 MHZ or spread to 54 and 81 MHz as well?
Watt meters measure all power, even if it's not where you want it.

Nope, single-conversion receivers aren't too popular these days unless they are intended to be saved as antiques.

The HA-600A is ok for a beginner's receiver but lacks quite a bit for any serious listening. The audio bandwidth is kinda wide making it hard sometimes to seperate stations. Single conversion means LOTS of image signals, so a preselector or tunable preamp is a good idea (the Ameco PT-2 works great with this radio!). The tuning mechanism is a little fussy, but a little sticky-wax on the shaft makes the string stick better. The radios need frequent alignments (especially on the 10.5 - 30 MHz spread, which is not very sensitive to begin with), but -DO NOT- try to align it without the manual and proper equipment!
Also, that 10.5 - 30 MHz spread is really tight above 25 MHz, so if you want to use it for CB then you should think about tuning the 10m bandspread down to that range. Another thing -- the switch knobs are too smooth to get a good grip, making them hard to turn. I had to swap the knobs on mine just to make it usable. The radio -does- have a 'remote' connector so it can be used with a transmitter, but you need to ground the RF input with a coax relay and mount it close to the receiver or you'll nuke your front end.

I like the radio because it works exceptionally well on 150 - 400 kHz.
That's about all.

I have a DX-160 myself. It's another radio that's very good for beginners (or collectors).

It's about time to put this argument to rest..... you're both right.
The amplitude of the -signal- changes according to the modulation, but the -carrier- is steady. The difference is that the signal (as seen on an o-scope) is the vector sum of the carrier and the sidebands, while the -carrier- (as seen on the spectrum analyzer) is only an isolated component of the total signal.

Does that clear things up a bit?

Haha! His own back yard is filthy. Lelnad has several illegally modded radios and talks with ham ops who are also illegal ops. Lelnad and his little band of illegal ham radio ops are fond of 28.630..a frequency outside his FCC authorized operating frequencies. Lelnad may have a surprise coming soon concerning legal enforcement of his illegal gear.
His illegal transmissions and actions on 10 meter, 11 meter, FRS, GMS and MURS have not gone unnoticed. He managed to piss off the wrong ham around Garden City. His Yaesu is hacked and chopped so bad all it can do is bleed.
Stay tuned for Part Deaux.

probable cause is an RF field sufficient to be stronger than 4 watts at a given distance. You wouldnt know about that though, cuz you are a dumbass keyclown without a clue. For that matter without a heterosexual bone in your fat azz as well.

The 2nd part of your rant is also wrong...The FCC says that posession constitutes intent to use. Go look it up, you goat roping fool.

You are welcome.

If he did it here, he would be tracked down in just a few days.
We won't stand for that here. A portable beam, turned horizontal, points the way to those bastards quickly. A line on the map from 2 or 3 locations will pinpoint the neighborhood, then a quick drive around with no antenna and lowered RF gain puts you in front of the house!

Been there, done that! The repeater owner took care of it after that.
I paid my dues to that repeater!!!

Hi all, posting this for a friend. Ends Friday around 6:00PM EST

Lafayette HA-600A is a ham / shortwave radio fron the early 1970's.
This one is super clean and great working. It also receives CB, AM / SSB.
Take a look if you like.

Really now. Maybe you should go back and comprehend what told me. I just responded in a manner that reflected my education and skills. If that is pompous to you then so be it. But mathematically to truely understand AM modulation does require a higher level of mathematics than just adding two plus two.

Forging Paul Folmsbee can get your dumb ass sued. He's a real estate agent in Cary and your games forging other posters is setting a prime example of a pattern of intentional harassment via electronic means.
Keep up the great work, Wilkerson. You'll soon join Lelnad and Dogie in the funny pages where we can all read about your indiscretions.

Roger beeps aren't illegal. I received an email back from Riley confirming they are indeed legal on cb radio, yet he does refer to the gadget as a "toy". If you want to see his response, send me an email.
I'd venture as far a guess that echo mics aren't illegal either on cb.
For some reason, the law pertaining to this confuses plenty of people and it's a common but mistaken belief concerning roger beeps, but they most certainly are legal.

He proceeded to explain to me how AM worked and asked me to refer to an old ARRL handbook. Instead I referred back to my college communications textbook and quoted an equation that is the standard form to mathematically explain how AM works.

Now is that is pompous or being condisending then I apologize to him.
It was my intention to properly explain mathematically how AM works.
Your reply to me seemed to be more of an attack. I don't try to attack

Sifting back through the thread it appears that you began this disagreement with an obtuse remark. To wit:

Like, where did -that- come from? It sounds like you misconstrued his remarks in your zeal to spout off something you read in an old text book that you picked up at a flea market. Well, read the book again but begin with the first chapter, which will usually state that Fourier analysis is only a mathematical tool for advanced engineering concepts (i.e, IMD analysis) and is not normally used to explain the general principles of amplitude modulation; a comprehension of the differences between the domains of time and frequency are usually considered to be sufficient for most educational purposes.

> Instead I referred back to my college
>communications textbook and quoted an equation that is the standard >form to mathematically explain how AM works.

Well, your 'education' is lacking since the formula you provided is only the basic groundwork for Fourier analysis; the analysis of non-linear mixing of any two signals requires a function (or several fuctions if there are more than two signals or if the signals are non-sine) requiring an iterative progression in order to integrate the distortion products. But I don't see how -any- of that matters when all Jay was talking about was boosting the audio in order to fully modulate a bigger carrier on a CB radio.....

>Now is that is pompous or being condisending then I apologize to him.
>It was my intention to properly explain mathematically how AM works.
>Your reply to me seemed to be more of an attack. I don't try to attack

It wasn't needed, nor was it requested.

> There is no intention of

We had a great time. Getting ready to book next years trip. It totally different than watching it on TV. The guy next to me had one of those scanner/TV gizmos that they rent there. You could watch TV, listen to the scanner, it showed speed and time for all the drivers. Next year I am going to rent one.

Hello Scott:

I think we are getting the Time Domain mixed up with the Frequency Domain.

My comment was on a Oscilloscope voltage measurements which are in the time domain. Without the RF Carrier voltage being modulated, increasing and decreasing you would not have modulation of course. I never said the power in the carrier changes. Or maybe I said it poorly?!??!?!?

But by added in more modulation power, like I said will allow for the finial rf amplifier to have more modulation power, allowing for more RF Carrier to be fully modulated, if it can handle the extra power. Simple stuff. More power and modulation kicking a high drive amp will cook!

I have seen where the radios have been somehow modified to allow unlinear modulation, that is the upper and lower envelopes are not identical, and the radios still sounds ok. Yeah I don't know what they do for the swing mods?!??!!?!

I put in Amplitude Modulation Envelope into Goggle and got a bunch of neat web sites on the subject.

Jay in the Great Mojave Desert, ...just down the road ah ways from the fillin station.

I had a 2002 Ranger and what I did was remove the ashtray and attach the radios mounting bracket with zip ties.
As for the power connection go to the local auto store and get some fuse taps (they attach to a fuse) and run the power line to that . It's a good idea to use a inline fuse on the power line at least 3 amp.

I believe 'obtuse' was the wrong word..... it should have been 'disjuctive'.

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

Toledo Amateur Radio Club
7234 Latcha Road
Perrysburg, OH 43551
Attn: Trustee John C. Lagger, AA8XS

RE: Warning Notice--Amateur Repeater W8RZM

Dear Mr. Lagger:

Our records indicate that you are the trustee for the above repeater system. Enclosed are recordings of violations on the repeater by N8WWM. The transmissions continued for a considerable time and there was no evidence of a control operator.

Since you are the trustee for the repeater, it is important for you to understand that you are responsible for its proper operation. The decision to operate a repeater is a totally voluntarily one. Repeaters are a convenience in the Amateur Radio Service, not a necessity. A repeater is a station just like any other station; and under Section 97.205 of the Commission's rules, all stations must have a licensee and control operator. Under Sections 97.103(a) and 97.105, control operators must ensure the immediate proper operation of a station, regardless of the type of station control. Furthermore, "automatic" control does not mean "unattended" operation. Unattended operation is not authorized under the rules.

The repeater licensee/trustee is responsible for all recurring violations and violations that are not inadvertent, just as a licensee is responsible for a base station HF station operation in the licensee's home. You must prevent recurring and deliberate violations on the repeater by locking rule violators out, using tones, warning users, limiting its operation, or taking whatever steps necessary commensurate with your responsibility as the licensee of the station. If you are unable to do so, then you must shut down your station.

If you are unwilling or unable to prevent violations on the W8RZM repeater, then your operator and station license will be subject to enforcement action by the Commission. Such action may include monetary forfeiture, operator license suspension or station license revocation.

Stick around,,I have a gaggle of hammies with admitted "bugs" up their ass. They claim I am their "bottom line" in life. You'll have to wade through the bullshit, though,,,,the AKC forges me on a regular basis, has a fetish for men's testicular wear (googie the term "jock" and "twistedhed" in this group), Geogre lies, and makes claims he refuses to provide for,, Lelnad lies and lies and lies and makes claims about cbers getting busted and goes to pieces when confronted with the facts that it never happened, Gillinad makes false assumptions and accusations against cbers with no proof, Dogie has no clue who is messing with him and ruining his life.

LOL,,,,man, these guys like to think of themselves as radio cops and internet speech cops, but when the tables are turned and they are made to obey rules, they become threatening, hostile, rabid, accusatory, personal, insultive and off-topic. Hundreds upon hundreds of pposts devoted to ME by the resident newsgroup terrorists N3CVJ, Frank Gillinad, KC8LDO, and WA3MOJ. See, they suffer massive deficits in intellec tand communication and as such, have never learned a way to communicate their feelings of self-worth effectively. They are defeated easily in debate as they allow their childish emotions to rule over logic. They are unable to debate or discuss absent of insult and are easily confounded by actual topics, so they do the only thing left that they were taught by whoever raised them....attack the person, not the topic.
Most hammies agree that those hammies who feel thecompulsive need to use such obscenities in any form of communication medium more than likely use the same language on the air: The Scourge of Hammie radio. Their egos were handed to them on a platter and they have never had do deal with such turmoil in their lives before. Good luck to you, sir, and thank you for your good sense. Perhaps you can teach some of these lowlives proper communication technique,,they have yet to display any in years of rec.radio.cb posting.

He ended up making up his own facts and insisted with no proof that I am an alcoholic and other insults. He was pretty easy to shut down. He just killfiled me, so in return I killfiled him. Now I only see his demented

Before we go any further, I feel I should point out that this group is an international one, not for just one country, so rules and specifications depend upon the country.

> Actually the filters used in CB are adequate to meet the published > specifications.

Which specification, legal requirement or manufacturer published spec. All products should meet with the manufacturer's published spec.
If you mean legal requirements, please tell me whether American CB rules state a minimum receiver specification such as adjacent channel rejection, image rejection or dynamic range.

Here in the UK, when CB was first legal, there was no minimum receiver specification set by law. As long as the set did not interfere with other services, they didn't care how much interference a CB suffered.
As a result, we were being sold real "bleed-over-boxes". Some were so bad that you just sat them on CH20 and could hear all 40 channels... "bleed-over" was suffered from miles away (literally).
Finally, the Brit. government got fed up with the public being stiffed and set a minimum RX spec. As a result, manufacturers started fitting crystal filters as standard in the 1st IF... the old sets with ceramic filters did NOT meet the legal requirement.

> They are not adequate to filter the splatter from over > modulated transmitters that are the norm for current CB operations.

It's not all "splatter", there has also been a big problem with gain compression. Another problem has been where strong signals cause the receiver to mix signals together, so two people giving you a strong signal will, together, form a third signal. I knew someone who used this to anoy someone. He would find what channel they were on, find the channel their other neighbour was on and from that work out what channel he could use to cause his enemy to get bleedover.

> Also the PCB layouts also a major contribution to poor stopband
> attenuation needed to filter out over bloated audio from rather poor > transmitted signals.

This was a problem with some of the worst sets we saw over here. You could remove the filter and still get a decent signal. Not just PCB layout, but also the way components were fitted.
Once the receiver specification came in force, such poor design would have seen the set rejected. Manufacturers cannot simply say their set is to spec, they must have them tested before they can be sold here.

> All the filtering will not help prevent adjacent channel splatter from > lousy trransmitters that are highly over modulated.

Here in the UK, we use FM. To fit FM in 10KHz spacing takes care.
At first, we were set 2.5KHz deviation. The problem is that, as well most people just cranking their set up, some people have voices that made matters worse. Some sets had poor audio circuits, which made it sound quiet, even when cranked up. You could knock out 2 channels each way and still sound quiet.
The maximum deviation has now been lowered, but people will just crank them up.

> Then there is the

Nothing will help once people start running power, with no regard to other CB users. I have met such people and, quite frankly, I wonder why they use CB when they have no regard for other users.

Peter.

No, I meant 'disjuctive': a barely relevant act, response, opinion, etc, made in a vain attempt to demonstrate superior intellect. A good example would be when someone plays spelling cop instead of addressing the topic of the discussion.

Where did that come from? Oh, I see, Lelnad, you must invent and lie in order to attempt a malignment toward me since nothing you or he ever professes is even remotely truthful. A more pertinent question is why you feel the need to work so hard to malign those whom you disagree with and attempt to create a false image of them?
I never worry about any of my transmissions. I have no need to. What good are electronic "fingerprints" when the feds can pinpoint my transmissions from Laurel, MD in a split second IF they really wanted to. See, that word "IF" always bites ya' in the azz! Ha ha Lelnad and the trouble posse...Frank Gilliland searching for pics of my house and dying to know my employer, Lelnad KC8LDO wanting my address more than he worships Jesus, speaking of his filthy obsessions with mens underwear.
Until you in the minority can understand that to actually be free requires that we be unfettered by each other concerning our self-directed activities, whatever you profess concerning "conforming to society" is reprehensible and not at all realistic. You don't own me, my body or my mind. I never allowed another to supercede my own will and never shall, but you are welcome to foolishly spend your life wailing about my kind of freedom loving individuals who think for ourselves and do not need told or directed what to do or how to do it. And if that includes the men's testicular wear I nailed to my fireplace mantle, well, so be it.
Pointing to a credible media source showing a cber having an enforcement action imposed for simply DXing or freebanding (this century) would have me dining on crow for weeks, but alas, you can't do it because you can't produce something that hasn;'t taken place. This is my claim. Read it. Study it. Memorize it. Put it on your forehead next Since Leland will not share with us all what has transpired, I guess I shall inform the group. He got his ass caught forging in another hammie room.. What happened was, again, as was the very first time he forged me in a hammie room, his arrogance would not allow him to remain silent when someone questioned him on the authenticity of a post, happens every single time, and as usual, ended up telling on himself, just like last time, only this time, a few who were more knowledgeable than he about computers called him on it. Lelnad, you have this unyielding tenacity, almost an innate need to attempt to present me as one who splatters runs big power and splatters the spectrum and invades hammie bands, despite my article (that you had the need (LOL) to snip) slamming those who do so...hmmmmmmmm......LOL..then again, this is what you must reduce yourself to,,,,as you have nothing else except an incredible self-loathing dillema.. Go back to forging people, Lelnad,,,it illustrates your train-of-thought, lowly intellect and whupped ego. Hammies and dog-pound refugees would do well to read my scintillating prose and learned insights on the fine art of freebanding. A pet peeve of mine is that hammies (certain ones) put down radio hobbyists like myself just because they are CBers and just because they use gear that's advanced. I have logged more DX on the freeband than most 2 meter hams have in a lifetime. Why shouldn't I be treated with respect? All I am asking is that the issue of legality be put aside and my achievements be recognized for what they are.

Attempting to pigeonhole me in (read: lie) with spectrum splatterers and hammie band intrusions illustrates the level of scum you currently reside. Upset that you were outted for your forging and lost ISP,s,,,you realize what was left of your reputation was destroyed by your malice. More lies from the ARRL representative, KC8LDO....forever etched in stone. Now, carry on about MEMEMMEMEMEMMEMEMEMEMEME...LOL!

Sound like the damn channel 22'ers over here. More power, more swing, more splatter. Chased everyone off except the drivers passing through.

I had to get a ham ticket to talk to anybody, and surprise!, all the missing CB'ers were "found".

manufacturer's specifications. In the US the only specifications on receivers is that they do not emit spurious radiation that can be detrimental to other services. Specifications are apart of the characteristics of the radio performance are solely up to the manufacturer. Here in the US the FCC does not mandate receiver minimum performance.

Sure, Lelnad. I'll invoke the good spirit of Dick pointing out to the hammie community what a parasite you are to hammie radio, and everyone knows Dick's opinion was respected by both sides. He had a knack for truth and a zero tolerance for your bullshit..... below is a post from rec.radio.amateur.policy, which everyone remembers Lelnad KC8LDO whining and crying for me to follow him to. When I refused to follow him to a hammie room, he took to forging me there along with Doug Adair N8WWM. Below is an entry by Dick, followed by the forge of myself. When Dick points out it was Lelnad C. Scott KC8LDO forging, Lelnad suddenly attacks Dick, telling him it's DICK that's being messed with. Riiiight! Then, right on time and on the heels of Lelnad's post of denial, a post by Dogie miraculously shows up and appears immediately afterward and attempts to make me the subject of topic in the hammie room where Lelnad couldn't get me to follow him in the first place. Finally,, at the bottom, Dick gives his final say in the matter.

Be kind to Robeson. His behavior is his way of dealing with his own problems. He believes in projecting his troubles upon strangers, quite the quirky way of dealing and providing himself with some sort of mental therapy. He's a control freak and member of the Civil Air Patrol who acts like he does for reasons known only to himself. He is a man who dislikes compromise, his ego is easily bruised, and one only needs browse his warblings over the years for such an illustration of how this blemish of a Radio Amateur. Robeson is never wrong, don't you know that by now?

ï¿½ï¿½Jerry Oxendine told me Robeson was an officer in the CAP and Robeson has confirmed this himself. This by itself wouldn't be an issue, but the fact he feels it important enough to put it out there in public and couple it with such behavior unbecoming of one who holds such a position makes his hypocrisy fair game.
ï¿½ï¿½It's plain to see why this country is hated more each day around the world. With leaders like we have and officers like Oxendine and Robeson in charge of anyone or anything, who are out there setting examples like they do and spoiling the good image of such civil/military endeavors and entities, it's no wonder this great country is having its image tarnished. Robeson is the worst type of American. He wraps himself in the flag and attacks those with whom he disagrees as opposed to attacking the actual subject matter/topic. Another "semi-qualified licensed" hammie who has much to learn regarding communications. He was taught Fields Communications and basic introductories regarding such, but as exampled, is illiterate when it comes to Discipline in Communications, knows nothing of Approaches of Communications, Relations, Negotiations and a host of other academia related to his chosen radio hobby that he never bothered to learn.
He and Oxendine are much alike. Zero tolerance for any views but their own myopic concerns.

You noticed that too, huh?
Lelnad is all freaked out because he was outed. Again. He becomes uncomfortable when somebody points it out, then gets mad when he is made to adhere to his rules he sets for everyone else. His most recent "There is no defense for breaking the law" came back to bite him in his fat ass recently. He recently acquired a criminal record and what you are witnessing is the manner he deals with personal trauma. Please don't be too hard on the guy. His acts are involuntary and its not like he has capacity or capability to exercise freedom of choice.

Poor Frank,,,your mettle was lost with your ego. Destroyed. Anywhere but a court of law, when one makes a claim, the burden of proof always is with the claimant. Get over yourself. You're drowning in your sea of lies and deception. You're in panic-mode, as you were on numerous occasions called on your lies and were asked to produce any,,,,,,,but alas, Frankenstein, you can not, and so, wild you go once again, off on a tangent, desperartely attempting to divert the topic away from your lies and incompetence of being able to provide a single post backing any of your accusations. It appears someone has your number, Frankie...and despite your severe paranoia,,it' ain't me,,,LOL! I'm the one who has asked you dozens of times to take your personal bullshit to email,,yet you prefer to muck up the cb room with your mild retardations and myths that Lelnad and his gang of jealousy-infected bretheren perpetuate, I assure you, nothing is further from the truth than lies and anger-motivated constructions that the Voob-named kennel club; KC8LDO, N8WWM, WA3MOJ, etc. dreamt on a daily basis and have nothing whatsoever to do with my actual life. I am not one of the unwashed unaware rabble of citizenry. Never have been. Hence I am not subject to the same laws as common, callow men. In college I was on the Deans List if that tells you anything and my superior intellect won me the favors of many like-minded individuals in both society and academia. But I shunned their transparent and shallow attentions to pursue my own unglamorous but rewarding path in the swamplands of Tampa Bay..hyuk! My unselfish nautical pursuit and my canny native instincts are what many believe have been responsible for opening the door to other dimensions in the continuum and my subsequent elevation in this here universe. If you doubt me then do so at your peril for there are many things on heaven and earth that are not yet understood so you would do well to pay your respects to me. If the media knew the truth then it would be the undoing of my special status and the end of all my pithy social comment. Only on the freeband does one learn of such truths. Lelnad and his gang of hounds may scoff, and I say let them, for what does one expect from such unenlightened commoners but an ignorant barbaric yawp in the face of such great wisdom.�So chin up, old chap, and stop worrying so much about the group. They really don't need you. I can't see why you can't speak for yourself and always feel the need to speak for the group. Really. I don't remember reading one single post that appointed you their spokesperson. Carry on.

2171. Cber Through My Computer?

I hope someone on this list can help me. I have a most unusual problem.

Over a period of the last month or so,
I've been picking up the broadcast of what I assume is a local ham radio operator or CBer here in Richmond, who goes by "Gatorman" or somesuch.
From what I gather, he lives fairly close to me (Museum District area),
possibly on or very near the Boulevard.

Here's the thing: he's coming through on ONE of the two speakers attached to my computer. I do not have, nor do I operate, a ham or CB radio myself.

What I initially thought was a one-off, and attributed to atmospheric conditions or just one of evening of bad juju, has proved to be an ongoing issue. I hear this guy through my speaker pretty much every day now. Often at the most inconvenient times (eg, 2:00 AM, for instance). And I'm at a loss as to what to do about it.

I'm only hearing his broadcast/talking...NEVER picking up the other end of the conversation(s).

Have you ever heard of this before? And if so, what can I do to stop it?

Anxiously awaiting your reply, and any help you can provide.

Your speaker wires are acting as an antenna. They are probably about 8 and a half feet long, a perfect quarterwave for 27 MHz. If the wire is just loose and dangling, try wrapping it up in a coil and tie it with a few bread ties. If that doesn't stop it, get some snap-on ferrites from RatShack and put a few turns around it closest to the speaker with the amplifier. You'll have to try each wire, (input, power, output to other speaker) to see if one lets more RF in then the others. You may have to filter each line.

You can always look for a large antenna on a close house and POLITELY let them know you are having a problem and they may even offer to help you fix the problem at no cost to you. They will have no inkling to help you if you come at them in a rude manner.

Hope,
A couple of things I can give you from your description. If you can understand what he's saying, he's talking on AM mode, rather than Sideband. If he goes by "Gatorman" and not by an FCC issued callsign, he's a CB operator, not a Ham.
By all means, do as was suggested earlier, by either coiling up your loose speaker wire, or by winding it around a ferrite snap-on choke, available at Radio Shack.
If this doesn't resolve your issue, you may want to see if a friend (or you if you're familiar with the proper end of a soldering iron) can replace the cheap, unshielded speaker wire with some two-conductor, shielded audio cable - available for $8.99/50ft at Radio Shack. A different set of speakers MIGHT help.
I would be very careful about approaching the CB operator. I'm not saying you shouldn't do it. What I AM saying is that if the CB operators in YOUR area are anything like the CB operators in MY hometown, they tend to be militaristic about their "right" to operate (even if they ARE operating illegally), and tend to be vindictive and downright unpleasant folks. In my mind, they give ALL the CBers, myself included, in this area a very, VERY bad name.
So, if you DO approach the operator, do so with an open mind, a pleasant disposition and if you find things turning sour, don't hesitate to say "Good day" and then feel free to come back here, where you can start asking questions about FCC field agents in the Richmond area. In this area at least 30 percent of the hardcore operators are operating illegally. You just might be able to find this guy doing the same and possibly have "Uncle Charlie" have a talk with him...

Agreed. Some CB'ers can be VERY nasty about it. I know of one, who fire bombed his neighbors house, because he got tired of the guy complaining. (I don't condone such actions!) so, I wouldn't even approach the guy at all.

If he's bothering you that bad, call the police, most of the enforcement issues have been turned over to the police now.

Sometimes the soundcard sleve is not ground (often times) this will leave a shielded cable unsheilded. By grounding the sleve of the audio connector most of the problems can be ratified. My wife and kid's speakers pick up a legal-beagle CB no problem. My rig in my studio with professional soundcards and proper wiring is impervious to all interference, cell phone and all.

All,

Thank you so very much for your replies and assistance! I will take your advice and go the "do-it-yourself-route" of trying to ground my speaker and/or wires first. I'd prefer to exhaust all reasonable (and reasonably priced) options before resorting to confronting the CBer, and/or calling the authorities.

At this point, and for selfish reasons, my main goal is just to get this guy's voice outta my house. I don't want to rat anyone out or get anyone in trouble, if I can avoid it.

Thanks again. You've been a big help!

You got excellent advice. You can't go anywhere with the authorities as the speakers are the problem. You don't hear the other end of the conversation as the signal is far too weak. In Europe, devices have to be able to withstand a certain amount of rf radiation without any change in operation (it used to be 3 V/M). In the U.S., no such standards existed when I was involved in electromagnetic compatability testing and I doubt there exist any regulations today. I have an old 900 MHz wireless telephone that (until I took it out of service for a 2.4 GHz wireless unit) interfered with my electronic doorbell!

I suspect that Scott's advice will fix your problem. If nothing else, if the speakers are fairly near each other, simply try forming the wire into a multi-turn loop to try and reduce pickup; otherwise, I suspect the ferrite will fix the problem completely.

You are one demented, sick, fucking useless mass of subhuman DNA. You don't support your kids, don't work, and obviously never sought the mental help the court ordered. Hopefully, one day your kids will piss on YOUR grave as you deserve.

Really? Tell ya what, why don't you and N8WWM give each other beer enemas, and then you two retards can work on whatever else it is you have in common.
Who was it that used beer enemas again Markie? Was it the Aztecs you claimed? And just for the record, WTF is the supposed purpose of squirting beer in your ass? Are the gerbils thirsty?

Over the years, here in the UK, we have lost most CB shops. Very few are left and it seems that products are disappearing, as one of our main dealer no longer lists some of the items that were listed a couple of years back.

I noticed that certain CB books are no longer listed here, although they are still in print.
Certain other products are still available, but are simply not listed in the shop catalogues.
Maybe the companies are selling directly and cheaply on the Net, giving the dealers no chance of competing.
But I have heard one person moaning, saying that he would rather get an illegal copy of a book than order the real thing from America.

Is there the same problem in America, products disappearing?
What CB products do you wish were still available or were missed by companies but could have sold? What do you really wish you could find in the shops?

Regards,
Peter.

Those things you used to get that converted a mobile into a base station.
You bolted the radio in the box and the box had a power supply and a speaker in it.
Useful for all types of radio.
I used one for my FT290.

Hi Peter, i personally don't blame him having been ripped off numerous times by US sellers myself. I bought the book deal from Lou a while back, all items arrived quickly and in good shape and the correct shipping costs were asked for so I reckon i got a good deal and would recommend Lou to anyone. You just have to weed out the assholes who like to take money from innocent buyers. Incidentally, i was going to open a shop myself but with local council red tape and rising costs, it looks like i'll be using the net instead. I won't be giving up my day job though and this will help to keep costs low. I won't be selling any books though as they just gather dust and this is personal experience!. Look at the number of Uniden & Cybernet manuals for sale on Ebay, they aren't selling fast, just constantly being listed and Knight's are giving away a freebie book when you ask for it due to space required! all in all books just don't sell due to the vast number of PDF files available on the net to download. Anyway, nuff rambling, tea's ready
Cheers
Xav.

Now answer the rest, Marcie:

Really? Tell ya what, why don't you and N8WWM give each other beer enemas, and then you two retards can work on whatever else it is you have in common.
Who was it that used beer enemas again Markie? Was it the Aztecs you

beer in your ass? Are the gerbils thirsty?

Hey Steve, what IS up with the enemas? Do you have a clue what the purpose for them is? Markie love to tell us his alternative use for beer that he does not drink, but didn't tell us the reason he uses that way. I'm sure it probably gets him drunk, just looking at how he types with his toes, but I wonder the other advantages. Are there EnemaGartens in his part of the country?

Yepper, He walked up on me, and all he wanted to do was shake my hand.
He talks a mean game, but when confronted, it's another story.
He also likes to bring the cops in on things as well.
If someone spookes him, He'll call the FBI, local detectives, ect...
He's a panzy, of the highest caliber.
Not worth the effort really, It's pretty sad.

I know what you mean man. He invited me over so he could beat me up, and then he realized I'm right down the pike from him in the Buckeye. He pointed a BB gun at me when I showed up and all I did was ask him to come outside and call me the names that he types here.

What makes a guy act like such a fool on the internet, and then be so spineless in person, mental illness?

Apparently it doesn't protect you from smallpox. I think it's just a waste of good beer....unless it's some piss water like Corona or Milwaukee's Best.
Of course if you get the gerbils drunk there is bound to be a party so it would be beneficial to get the gerbils dancing.

Because he is a keyboard bully. He knows that he is safe as long as he doesn't have to face the person. He justifies it by thinking he is a ham hero by ratting out auctions and making homo remarks at anything approaching illegal CB.

More wasted trees on the useless. Too bad we can't figure out a way to feed him surplus pine trees instead of cheese. Just run em' thru the chipper and pour them in the dogie feed bucket. What a savings and very environmentally friendly. He could make the pine scented milorginite.

He'd like you to think it's because of illegal CB. The laws only apply to everyone else, not N8. (never mind his court appearances and convictions)

You can only sling trash, wacky boy, you can't stop the AKC from conducting operations against keyclownism. Once again, your programming shows. Thanks for the entertainment, mopeadope.

Citizen's Band radio for all practical purposes is dead in the US. There's several states or areas where it's still fairly active but in the day of computing and cell phones radio hobbyists are fewer and far between. There isn't a CB shop within fifty miles of me the closest being a truckstop. Manufacturers are limited to one or two major players. Amateur radio has seen the same decline. It's been almost ten years since I had a base operation reminiscent of the days when I ran Browning Mark III's and four element vertical beams. I have most of my equipment packed away in their original boxes including vintage gear including a Viking Valliant and Yesau 101ZD. I've been tempted many times to put them on eBay knowing I'll never get they're worth. One of these days I may break everything out and put a vertical or sloped dipole on the house if the wife allows.

Does anyone have a schematic for a Galaxy 30 watt amp? Someone gave it to me. I never heard of it, and can't find anything on it. It's small. I am not sure if it's a QRP amp or a CB linear, because I don't think I have ever seen one that small. It's a one FET MS1307, which is a 25 watt transistor. Don't know what the dead in is supposed to be.

Hallo NG,

ich bin gerade dabei einen Adapter zu bauen, um meine DNT Mikrofone an eine PAN PC 80 anzuschliessen. Das hei&#65533;t, ich ben&#65533;tige einen Adapter von DIN (Kupplung) auf 6-poligen US-Stecker (oder JAP-Stecker). Dazu benutze ich 6-adriges Kabel und verl&#65533;te beide Stecker eins-zu-eins so, da&#65533; GND->GND, PTT->PTT, RX-->RX. Das hei&#65533;t also, da&#65533; ich alle Verbindungen des einen Steckers (DIN) auf die des anderen (US / JAP) abbilde. Da innerhalb der Steckerbelegung die Massen schon verbunden sind, frag ich mich was ich mit der Kabel Abschirmung (bzw. Isolierung) machen soll? Kommt die irgendwie an den US-Stecker (Klemme) oder soll ich die einfach vernachl&#65533;ssigen? Danke f&#65533;r Eure Hilfe.

Hello NG, I am straight thereby an adapter to be built, in order to attach my DNT of microphones to PAN PC 80. That is, I need an adapter of DIN (clutch) on US plug with 6 pins (or JAP plugs).
For it I use 6-adriges cable and solder both plugs to one-one in such a way that GND- GND, PTT-PTT, RX -- RX. That means thus that I all connections plug (DIN) on those other (US/JAP) image.
Since within the steckerbelegung the masses are already connected, ask I which I with the cables screen (and/or isolation) to make itself is? Come somehow to the US plug (clamp) or is does I those simply to neglect? Thanks for your assistance. Greeting Gero

Translation: Morse code fans sending out an SOS

By John McCormick
Tribune staff reporter
Published March 2, 2006

A century-old hobby filled with dots and dashes is embroiled in a debate about its future and what level of training should be expected of those called on to help during local and national emergencies.

Morse code, a slowly dying language, has become radio's equivalent of Latin: historically important, but increasingly irrelevant in a world of cell phones, computers and instant messaging.

With mariners and the military having moved to other technologies long ago, ham radio operators are virtually the sole practitioners of a technique that made national and international communication possible with the telegraph.

Now, after decades of requiring code proficiency to obtain certain amateur radio licenses, the Federal Communications Commission is considering a proposal to do away with the qualification, generating strong emotions among the nation's more than 600,000 operators.

The debate comes after the completion of one of the highest-profile missions in decades for amateur radio operators, who relayed messages about everything from medical supplies to missing people when Hurricane Katrina wiped out telecommunications along the Gulf Coast.

As ham radio operators debate the need for Morse code, military officials say it is taught in an expansive way at only two U.S. bases, with just a few dozen members of the full-time military learning it each year. It is primarily used as a backup for joint operations with less-developed nations.

"Morse is a fading skill in today's day of information, especially as we get into networks and cyberspace," said Capt. Kevin Hooley, commanding officer of the Navy's Center for Information Dominance in Florida.

The International Maritime Organization officially phased out Morse in 1999 for ships in peril, replacing it with the high-tech Global Maritime Distress and Safety System. Before that, in 1993, the Coast Guard shut down its Morse code emergency distress network, a system that was a throwback to when ships used the chilling "SOS" as their internationally recognized call for help.

Nations drop requirement

Code requirements for amateur radio licenses have already been eliminated in some other nations, including New Zealand, Ireland and Singapore. The FCC is expected to issue a decision this year after reviewing more than 3,700 written comments.

Although his radio is capable of transmitting voice with near-perfect clarity, Mike Dinelli prefers to tap away on a Morse code key when he sends messages around the world to other radio hobbyists. "It's part of the romance of radio," said Dinelli, 49, a commercial real estate broker from Skokie who has been a ham radio operator since 1980.

Others say the code requirement is needed to keep the ham radio bands from degrading to the level of citizens band radio, which peaked in popularity during the 1970s and was known for its often-colorful conversation.

"I've always said that we need some hoops to jump through to make it viable," said Ed Hayes, a ham radio operator in Longview, Wash. "If you don't have to do anything to get the license, it puts you in the CB world."

Hayes, a retired community college teacher, learned the code when he was a Boy Scout. He belongs to the International Morse Code Preservation Society, which claims about 12,000 members in North America.

Hayes can send and receive about 25 words per minute in Morse code, a glacial rate compared to modern, digital technologies. "I don't even have a microphone hooked up," he said.

Pure nostalgia for some

For others, such views are pure nostalgia for a hobby that has been hurt by the popularity and communications power of the Internet.

"To require young people to learn an old language that is very seldom used is a stumbling block for a lot of people to get in the hobby," said John Kuntz, a ham radio operator from Fennimore, Wis., who wrote the FCC to support eliminating the code requirement.

Making it easier to obtain a license could increase the number of operators at a time when the frequencies authorized for their use have come under increased pressure. Some in the hobby fear the government could move to auction off portions of their radio spectrum for other purposes.

Although few young people are entering the hobby, about 660,000 are licensed nationally, and roughly 22,000 in Illinois, according to the American Radio Relay League, a national organization with about 170,000 members.

Kuntz, an electronics technician, said he has little concern that the ham radio bands will be turned into the trash-talking environment of

CB radio if the Morse code requirement is dropped.

"A bigger problem is not getting enough new people into the hobby to keep it going," he said. "If we don't keep attracting young people into the hobby, we aren't going to have that backup system of radio communications out in the country, which can really be an asset for public service."

Backers of the code requirement, meanwhile, maintain that Morse has tremendous advantages during crises. Morse can be sent and received when less favorable radio conditions prevent voice signals from being heard, and it requires only basic equipment that is readily available during emergencies.

"There are counties that are very poor that don't have other kinds of equipment," Dinelli said. "Hams have to be able to use this mode so they can communicate in times of need."

Morse code's storied history started on May 24, 1844, when Samuel Morse transmitted the question, "What hath God wrought?" over 35 miles of wire from Washington to Baltimore.

The accomplishment amazed observers and started the process of speeding information across the country and world, replacing the Pony Express and courier pigeons.

Titanic used wireless code

After the 1912 sinking of the Titanic, which used wireless code to try to attract help, Congress enacted legislation that required U.S. ships to use Morse code radiotelegraph equipment for distress calls.

Over the years, the code has changed very little. Bowing to the importance of the Internet, the @ sign was added in 2003 by the International Telecommunications Union, the first new character in decades.

Hooley, the commanding officer at the Navy's information center, said he is not aware of any military usage of Morse code in recent years. Still, during operations in the Middle East, he said there were discussions about whether coalition partners had the capability.

"We never had to resort to it, but it was sometimes asked as a possibility," he said. "It is a skill that we have to keep."

I guess I should have had to learn to shoe a horse before I was allowed to drive a car.

As a ham, CW should not be required to use HF, however, the CW portions should be CW only, and not shared with other weak-signal data modes. Those that want to use CW should be allowed to ride their horse without having to step over the other non-CW users. .-.-.-

Thanks for the humourous inputs (;-)

But have two inputs now.
In the telegraph days, numbers were used for common phrases so as to save time
Thus 73 was Best Regards
88 was love and kisses

There is a list of 90 + numbers at URL:
http://ac6v.com/73.htm#73

The two inputs I have so far are 99 = "Get Lost" probably unofficial 99 = "Love and kisses" (same as 88)

So for Vinnie and Scott -- the first definition is for you (;-)

Any other inputs ? Must be some old telegraphers out there

If it's rated for 25 watts, then DK should be 1/4 or 6.25 watts.
The radio by itself will do as good.

They see YOU in that stall, you faygela. Now, you must admit the AKC have cut the number of keydowns in half. There is almost NO illegal keyclown activity anymore, and who do you have to thank? The AKC of course! WE did it! This newsgroup was a hotbed of keyclown and amp selling gay sissy activity. The iron heel of the AKC came down and BAM no more keyclowns, except for a final few holdouts. So good news sissyboy: the amps continue to get ratted on eBay and AKC grow stringer and NOTHING you can do about it.

Yes!!! I can get them any time I want and to make it even worse for they are gone... Now what anti keydowners???

Hi.

I still prefer a printed book for anything more than a page or two. Computer screens are not really the most comfortable way to read a book, and I don't find PDFs the best way to view information.
The problem is that, to make it worth the time writing a book, there has to be the profit there. We all need to live, and those who expect to given everything free would not work for nothing... they would expect at least the minimum wage. Free information is fine, but it does not pay the bills while you put in hours upon hours making that information available.

If you do set up selling CB or related equipment, please let me know so I can add you to the dealer database... free advertising.
You can Email me via the form on the Web site.

Regards,
Peter.

Back in the early 80s, when CB was first legal here, music players, keyers and other wallies may have chased a few of the original CBers away. I remember some saying that they were giving up for that reason, but was that just an excuse, had they just had enough of CB?

I don't believe that the majority of UK CBers were chased off, I believe that they either had enough of it or decided to go with the latest technology... using mobile phones and Internet.
Some may have gone to Amateur, but the Ham figures are nowhere near enough to account for the 100s of thousands that have left CB. Besides, there is nothing to stop someone using both.

Peter.

OK. I'll just keep my TS-250, 2 TS-667V's, a Super Star 250 and some off brand "225" with 2 455's in it.

And an RCI 2950 that covers 26 to 32 MHz.

My current collection includes, 13 CB's,
2 IC-2100's that will transmit 136 to 174, an HTX-420 dual band HT that covers 420 to 470 and 3 FRS radios.

My brother in law and I were tuning a new antenna for his Cobra 18 WX ST and when we got the SWR as low as we could, tried it out. As he got further away during a test run I encouraged him to speak up because he wasn't getting decent modulation. When he did the result was pulsating oscillations that obscured his audio.

I'm an audio guy, but I mix rock concerts. The type of squealing I usually deal with is some jerk guitar player wanting 130 dB SPL from his monitor wedges. There's not any possibility for audio feedback in this case, my rig was two miles away from his and he doesn't have talkback.

At any rate, the question is, would replacing the audio amp chip do the trick, is the part readily available, and is it anything a guy with plenty of soldering experience couldn't tackle.

Thanks in advance...
Jon

Even less when the Uncle gets off his duff and comes to terms

The only reason the Uncle is dragging his feet, is because it won't make them any money to line his pockets, like forcing DTV down our throats so they can auction off all that space and filling the landfills with perfectly good TVs. Dumb, real dumb.

1:1 SWR does not mean resonance.
It just means you've made the antenna about 50 ohms. You are probably getting RF down the shield of the coax and causing RF feedback. You need to decouple the antenna from the shield with a proper ground plane.

Are you sure you didn't pull the ground loose from the base of the antenna or the crimped on PL-259? If this is a mobile installation on a trunk lip, don't trust the hinges to have a good RF ground. I guess this is a magmount?

Since you didn't describe your antenna, we can't help any more then this.

And I have hundreds of GB of lossless music and am a shn/circ manager at db.etree.org and also a moderator of a major BT site. When a famous old band played locally, the main man made sure I was on the guest list!

No, replacing the amp chip won't help. Fixing the antenna's problem will.

Try your local library for an ARRL handbook. It should be somewhere around 621.

The Anti Keydowners AKA georgie porgie, came to this group and was sad that he couldnt make friends and could do nothing in life. So he figured since I have no life and nothing else to do except lick crisco cathy every now and then, I would just bombard this group with all kinds of anti keydowner stuff. And since george likes gay sex he also pushes his own agenda on this group as well. However to his dismay, all kinds of amps are still sold and used daily on cb radio and I have seen no actual drop off at all. Hence the anti keydowners are even more upset and get more aggressive. Why? What else is he going to do?

Are you sure the problem was lack of modulation and not lack of carrier signal strength?

Motorboating? Sounds like it might be a power supply deficiency.

I don't get too much monitor feedback, but then I work smaller rooms.
When someone cranks their monitor it usually messes up the room's EQ and I have to dial in a compromise between the monitor and the PA.

>At any rate, the question is, would replacing the audio amp chip do the

A new audio amp probably won't change anything. Check your power supply. You should be getting a steady 13.6 - 14 volts to the radio and it shouldn't change under full modulation. If the signal is weak, make sure your antenna is installed properly (good grounds & cable).
Get a bigger antenna if necessary.

rrcb has what they call in the WWF a story line and if you dont know it you are left out of the action. the storyline tells who is the good guy and who is the bad guy who did what to who and who holds a grudge and has old scores to settle lol with who etc. here is what I know of it so far.

in the beginning there were illegal cbers and legal cbers and superbowl stars and amp gods who were more or less in charge of rrcb and acted as moderators and gave the legal cb people a hard time. Then doug N8WWM showed up and openly made fun of the illegal cbers and coined the word keyclowns. so it is the keyclowns vs the antikeyclowns. anyone who defended legal cb was called AKC and there were poeple like Dave Hall and Frank around at that time as well as Dwight Stewart who supposedly maskeraded as a guy named Aaron Voobner aka the leader of the AKC. Around this time Leland scott answered some posts of twistedhed and let him know that he did not feel freebanding was cool. twistedhed then attacked him and of course doug joined in on the fun. Supposedly doug found Twisteds po box before he had it changed and sent him a used jock strap in the mail. This started a war with twistedhed vs the world but most especialy Leland who he blames for a number of forgeries someone did where twistedhed supposedly was placing false for sale ads on the web. Oh and there was a famous Respect For Freeband post posted in the ham newsgroup again supposedly by twistedhed but blamed on Leland scott and others. There was so much strife that many of the amp gods and superbowl keyclowns left the group to a few die hards remain like twistedhed, landshark and steveo. "george" came into the picture late as he is supposed to be a NJ keyclown and superbowl star that got his ham license and went legal. somewhere in the archives there is a post where he baited twistedhed with a call wa3moj in order to getb him to look up the name George Busch which was a joke about the president. From then on twisty called him george and so did everyone else. also twisty got a hold of many erronous callsigns and names that he tried to pin on people like N7VCF for Frank etc. Landshark is a keyclown that used to curse and troll as bad as any but eventually he turned in to a hypocrite that now reports his enemies to ISPs for spam and trolling. Once frank I think did a google search and found posts that Landshark made in a TS transexual group cruising for sex which have been prove to be accurate which pisses off landshark. His butt buddie is a keyclown named Steve aka steveo aka moparholic @hotmail.com who has lately come on as an internet tough guy his claim to fame is that he visits peoples houses and threatens to beat them up. he did go to lelands house and doug N8WWMs house and take photos after he was chase away. Im sure I have missed some but those are the highlights.

This stuff has been going on for near 5 yrs now and shows no signs of letup and just goes to show you cant tell the players without a score card lol

Full size quarter wave whips (stainless steel, not two part fibreglass).
I have not seen those for a while.
I used to use them for commercial applications as they were a fraction of the price of the commercial equivalent and less likely to break if hit by a tree.
Two piece ones are useless.

I used to have one of those back in the early 90's on a very strong mount fitted to the rear of my old Fiat Panda. People said it looked like a dodgem

Scott.. I have had one before.. 7/8 wave antenna.. Ill admit.. The construction is a bit CHEAP.. BUT with some mods it is a great antenna..

THANKS

That's it especially for DX. If 38 lsb is quiet, it's a good time for talking ground wave 70 mile stuff, which is fun too. You're right with the 38, forget the freeband except for once in a while.

I'm patiently waiting for the Uncle to conform to WRC-03, especially the part about dropping the code. I'll be a general at the next test session, calling CQ on 10 meters later that day.

It's nice to have other bands to work when one is dead or too noisy. You can't have too many radios going at the same time! I'll be on 2 meters with my 440 and CB going, along with my scanner. I also like to tune in my local cab company. They bitch and yell and cuss about calls! Since they're right up the street, I'll tune the base on my scanner and the mobiles on my very sensitive 2 meter ICOM.

It's a blast during rush hour. It's a split system and they always talk at the same time, so dispatch doesn't hear the cab talking and then there's silence until one repeats their message. The dumb cabbies think it's like a full duplex cell phone!!!

Let me know when you want to try. Pick a warm night without rain.
My CB is mobile only. I have no problem hitting Richmond and DE with my little 225 amp.

I dropped the "69". I stole my drinking buddy's numbers when he died.
It's been over ten years already. I'm back to my original 104 in Baltimore.

I kept the email address so folks know it's still me.

You got it Scott, it's usually more fun to listen than it is to talk anyway. I wouldn't get too worked up about working 10M, it opens and closes just like 11M. (ewe knew dat)

I like the down-cycle on 11.

I've spent years working DX on 11, so I should be killer when it comes to working DX on 10. I already know how the band works. Makes it easy.
I hear the seasoned hams say that 10 is dead. I tell then they should call anyway. If no one calls, no one can hear them and come back to them. I've told them there has been many a night that's perfectly quiet, and then an unfamiliar voice will come out of the radio asking, "Hey, where you alls at? I've been listening to you for half an hour."
I've also told them that just because the station they hear is weak, to try to call them anyway. The path isn't always the same both ways.
I've also told them to listen for the telltale static that precedes a DX opening. I don't think they want to hear an experienced DX'er give them 10 meter hints!

> I like the down-cycle on 11.

If the bro's didn't run full tilt splatterboxes, I'd enjoy it too!
If you think bleedover sounds bad on AM, flip it to sideband. It becomes high pitched static. I don't mind folks using amps, I just want them to do it cleanly and share the band with others.

BTW, bleedover isn't just for 11 meters. I've had overdeviated stations use more then 15 KHz on 2 meter simplex. That sucks, too!

I think it's more of a logistics problem when you end up on two meters.
Mostly because of antenna restrictions. (as we've seen from the pics posted

I understand what bleed-over is, especially when a mans aerial is so limited.

It may have an 858 chip. Either way, those old chips expand easily.
I wouldn't expect it to be very broadband, but you'd be able to cover all 40. But then you'd have a hacked radio, either way.

Aren't they just green LED's? If they're light bulbs, use LED's to replace.
Measure the voltage and make sure to limit the current with resistors if you do.

One resistor feeding many LED's will need a different value then one resistor for each LED, and a single resistor will need to be a higher wattage. The power dissipated by the resistor is equal to the voltage dropped across it times the current running through it.

Quick Ohms law chart:

------- -------
I | R E | I

If you don't understand this basic electronics course, seek more experienced help.

I believe it has a 02A chip which is easily modified with a switch. Only issue is the age of the rig and if any of the crystals have degraded.

Be kind to Robeson. His behavior is his way of dealing with his own problems. He believes in projecting his troubles upon strangers, quite the quirky way of dealing and providing himself with some sort of mental therapy. He's a control freak and member of the Civil Air Patrol who acts like he does for reasons known only to himself. He is a man who dislikes compromise, his ego is easily bruised, and one only needs browse his warblings over the years for such an illustration of how this blemish of a Radio Amateur. Robeson is never wrong, don't you know that by now?

ï¿½ï¿½Jerry Oxendine told me Robeson was an officer in the CAP and Robeson has confirmed this himself. This by itself wouldn't be an issue, but the fact he feels it important enough to put it out there in public
and couple it with such behavior unbecoming of one who holds such a position makes his hypocrisy fair game.
ï¿½ï¿½It's plain to see why this country is hated more each day around the world. With leaders like we have and officers like Oxendine and Robeson in charge of anyone or anything, who are out there setting examples like they do and spoiling the good image of such civil/military endeavors and entities, it's no wonder this great country is having its image tarnished. Robeson is the worst type of American. He wraps himself in the flag and attacks those with whom he disagrees as opposed to attacking the actual subject matter/topic. Another "semi-qualified licensed" hammie who has much to learn regarding communications. He was taught Fields Communications and basic introductories regarding such, but as exampled, is illiterate when it comes to Discipline in Communications, knows nothing of Approaches of Communications, Relations, Negotiations and a host of other academia related to his chosen radio hobby that he never bothered to learn.
He and Oxendine are much alike. Zero tolerance for any views but their own myopic concerns.

Mopeydope you again get a misfire when you try to analyze Anti-Keyclown motivations.

None of us are angry. We just like making you fools write posts like the one I am responding to. Hey, continue on with your misconception, though. Just like the keyclowns you are, you guys will continue to not get it.

Anti-Keyclowns don't "care" just like you don't "care" about the fact that you are criminals. You got your fun and Anti-Keyclowns have theirs.

Look at all the threats and cursing you key-sissies do. Twithed went on and on with the "1mangayboy" theme for months, Chuckie threatened N8 with shooting and raping his family, etc, etc.

All that caused was that now you key-sissies are a great source of fun. Anti-Keyclowns start a song, and you KeyQueens dance to it. You KeyQueens are owned.

Your thuggish responses and fat mouthed blathering about how "nothing will happen" were correct. NOTHING has happened in spite of your threats to do this at Dayton, Do that at N8's house, "adjust his attitude", "Get" N8, etc, etc, etc. Why not? Because you are all a bunch of little sissies that talk trash but don't have the balls to do anything. Period.

How many times has AKC told these threateners to do something? Every time.
How many times have one of you KeyQueens done it? NONE!

Sissies, all of ya. Limp chimps in a federal criminal monkey house.

Someone has "advised" you to remove parts from your radio.

The manufacturer has already cheapened them to the point that all parts are important. There are no unimportant parts.

Do you want a clean, clear reliable unit, or a loud, scratchy, hard to understand unit that's being run like a racecar, right up to the point of being unreliable?

I don't know about you, but I'd hate being asked to repeat myself because I have a unclear radio.

They say the next skip cycle will be 50% stronger then the last one.
That means you'll need 50% less power to talk DX. Who wants 50% more bleedover then the last one. If it wasn't for all the class C splatterboxes, it would have been really enjoyable.

Dayton Hamvention® Announces 2006 Award Winners

DAYTON, OH, Mar 10, 2006--Dayton Hamvention has announced the winners of its 2006 Amateur of the Year, Special Achievement and Technical Excellence awards. Being honored for their contributions to the Amateur Radio Service are Gordon West, WB6NOA--Amateur of the Year; Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH--Special Achievement Award, and Dick Illman, AH6EZ--Technical Excellence Award.

Gordon West, WB6NOA

West, of Costa Mesa, California, was named Amateur of the Year for his efforts in recruiting and training many new amateurs, in addition to his nearly lifelong involvement in ham radio. Starting in the late 1950s "Gordo," as he is known, worked for some of the big names in the field helping to develop several innovative pieces of equipment.

In the 1980s West and his wife Suzy, N6GLF, began teaching ham radio classes at college and marine venues and authored Amateur Radio training books sold by RadioShack and equipment dealers around the country.

A Radio Club of America fellow and a recipient of the ARRL Instructor of the Year Award, West remains active from 75 meters through 10 GHz, spending at least a couple hours on the air every day, helping new hams make friends on the many nets he runs.

In addition, West volunteers with the American Red Cross communications team in Orange County, California, and regularly offers free kids classes and classes for cities to support their Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT).

"It's my give-back to a hobby that gives me the satisfaction of offering free classes for kids and emergency responders, and I thank all the ham operators who support our training program, and the ARRL for their continued support with the emergency communication Web-based classes," West said.

Special Achievement Award: Riley Hollingsworth

Riley Hollingsworth

Hollingsworth, who's Special Counsel in the FCC Enforcement Bureau at the FCC's Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, office, will receive Hamvention's Special Achievement Award for his efforts in resurrecting the FCC's

Amateur Radio enforcement effort and helping to eliminate an increasing number of enforcement problems plaguing the ham bands. Hollingsworth's efforts, begun in 1998, reversed more than a decade of FCC apathy in amateur enforcement. Radio amateurs across the US credit Hollingsworth with reducing malicious interference and other problem behavior on the air.

Hollingsworth's other FCC responsibilities include interference resolution in the Land Mobile and Public Safety Services. In past years, he served as co-chair of the FCC's PCS Broadband and Narrowband Licensing Task Force, for which he received a Reinventing Government Award in 1994. He also managed the FCC's 800 MHz Task Force in which new 800 MHz spectrum was assigned in 13 cities, and he organized a Commission enforcement initiative to recover underutilized land mobile radio channels in major cities for reassignment.

A graduate of the University of South Carolina, he received his law degree from Wake Forest University. Hollingsworth was first licensed in 1960 in his home state of South Carolina and is a member of the Quarter Century Wireless Association and F.I.S.T.S. CW club.

Technical Excellence Award: Richard "Dick" Illman, AH6EZ

Dick Illman, AH6EZ

Illman, who lives in St Charles, Illinois, was picked to receive the 2006 Technical Excellence Award for his work as principal staff engineer at Motorola in developing a broadband over power line (BPL) system for his company that essentially eliminates HF interference. The nominating committee cited Illman's technical knowledge and his willingness to help tackle and overcome BPL's thorny interference issues, influencing Motorola to deliver his patent-pending solution, Powerline LV.

Motorola approached the ARRL in 2004 seeking input on a BPL design that could avoid many or most of the interference problems that have plagued some other BPL systems. The company and the ARRL subsequently cooperated in deploying a test stand Powerline LV system between ARRL Headquarters and W1AW. Preliminary results from the ARRL tests have shown the Motorola Powerline LV system seems to be Amateur Radio-friendly.

Motorola introduced its Powerline LV wireless-to-low voltage BPL solution at the United Telecom Council's "Telecom 2005." The ARRL has cited the Motorola solution in filings to the FCC as an example of a BPL system designed to avoid interference to or from Amateur Radio.

Illman, who hold a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering, has enjoyed a 31-year career with Motorola Systems Engineering. His idea to include a set of hardware notch filters in Motorola's Powerline LV equipment to protect Amateur Radio beyond the traditional technique of turning off specific carriers is an industry first.

His passion for ham radio began in high school as a Novice licensee in 1969 and has continued over 37 years on all bands and all modes. It has included everything from working satellites while aboard a moving passenger train to demonstrating ISS contacts to Boy Scouts. An avid DXer he works more than 200 countries each year, in part because of a friendly competition among his fellow Fox River Radio League members in Aurora, Illinois. Illman has been the club's president for the past two years and has been recognized with the club's Ham of the Year award three years in a row.

Difficult Choices

Hamvention Awards Chairman Pat Johnson, KC8ZZO, said the committee faced a tough task selecting the winners from among a number of worthy nominees. "We were impressed with the quality of the nominations," he said. "We believe the winners all represent excellence in service to the ham radio community."

Hamvention Chairman Jim Nies, WX8F, praised the winners. "On behalf of the Dayton Amateur Radio Association and Hamvention 2006, it is my distinct pleasure to congratulate this year's award winners," he said. "Please join me in recognizing each of these gentlemen for their outstanding contributions to Amateur Radio and their many years of devotion to the Amateur Radio Service."

Held this year from May 19 until May 21, Dayton Hamvention, the world's largest Amateur Radio gathering, annually attracts more than 25,000 people to the greater Dayton area. The event includes exhibits, a flea market, forums and educational sessions. More information is on the Hamvention Web site.

It even made a blurb in our local newspaper in the science section.

Jim, have you gone Skype yet? It's 16 bit sound and full duplex and can do video. Echolink is going to have to upgrade. It's the

Some time back, as I was returning home after shopping, I noticed a new antenna over the top of the houses. Strange thing was that it's position appeared to be between the houses... in the middle of the road.

As I got to the corner, I spotted what it was... a BBC radio car with a small antenna on a big mast. Quite a small car, considering the size of mast.
I would guess that the mast fitted through the roof and would be strapped to the floor of the vehicle.

Regards,
Peter.

It was the Mr's car which I occasionally used if I was too lazy arsed to get mine out of the Garage. As for the Fidelity 1000, yes they were cracking rigs, well sort after and most people would aspire to owning one. Occasionally, if you are very lucky, you see the odd one on eBay mustering a small fortune (Very Small ;o)

What would one possibly have to say to mopeadope that can't be said right here? He's a keyclown. Keyclowns have nothing to offer that's worth hearing, anyway.

Mopeadope just wants to tell us the AKC shouldn't be doing opposition to keyclownism, or attempt intimidation to get the dissent to cease. Frankly, coming to somene's house like that is just a peck of trouble waiting to drop on any keyclowns stupid enough to do it. It is great to feel that frustration emnating from you sissy sock puppeteers. .

AKC don't care what you or mopeadope want. AKC don't care how insulting you act. AKC don't care at all. Nothing you have said has any effect on AKC people. We know it sucks to whine agonizingly about mopeadopes fruitless trips, but that's how it is. Deal with it. If you don't like what someone says you can always filter it, so whoopie doo! But you keyclowns aint got enough upstairs, you are just whiny children that daddy wouldn't give a Hershey bar to while waiting in the checkout at Walgreen's.

If ya don't like them apples you can sniff the new basket of rotten ones cooked up by the AKC. they come in rotton and extra wormy...you oughta like either one.

I have the service manual but it is in storage, would like to know the mA setting for VR15 and VR16.

thanks,

Mopedaope you stupid ball licking ape. Dont you know your doing exactly what AKC wants? AKC has lulled you into a false sense of security so when you least expect it they can rock your world.

Look at how you post, slam, denigrate, google, dredge, whine, moan, cry and snivel.

Just look!

-N8 returned fire against the keyclowns, so they began posting crisco cathy and court records.

-Leland stood up to the keyclowns, and the Al Banys posts started.

-"George" angered keyclowns, and they responded with Nancy Busch postings.

-Dave Hall dared question keyclown beliefs, and they responded with Kim Hall postings.

Glorious! Keyclowns respond 100% exactly as AKC predicted they would. What a hoot. They can't fight the training and the chips. AKC rules. The keyclown mind is hopeless against the righteous might of the AKC.

Keyclowns think they can stop dissent against illegal CB by going after your family or who they think your family is. Never happen. Never happen keyclowns.

A TRC-465 is 65mA for driver and 70mA for final.

You can always measure the voltage to it. You need .67 volts to overcome the diode's junction on the base.

It's not the outside that counts. Inside dogie has his large stash of not, I'm sure you just smelled fear (or pee) pouring from his pants leg.

His neighbor came outside and warned me about him....pretty sad considering the hood he lives in. (lock yore doors)

All I seen was a pale looking coward pointing a BB gun at me. He wouldn't

Good thing he didn't pull the trigger. I hear he lined the barrel with

Just got to thinking about it, fugly is not supposed to own a BB gun as he is a felon. So once again the poo pile dogie who rants about us breaking the law on 11 meters is still breaking the law in his own home with a kids toy.

It seems that everyone recommends running the lines to the battery (less noise and whatnot - though increased chance of running down battery if I leave the radio on) - however, I dont understand how to connect the wires to the battery "terminals"/bolts/whatever. Please understand Im a TOTAL newb at this - Just got an old Cobra 19 Plus I wanna hook up.

I'll need to buy/connect more wire to run it all the way to the battery - what kind? do I just twist two ends of wire together to connect them?

Once I reach the battery.. how do I harness the power.. do I just wrap the wires around the battery? I dont understand this part...

Thanks...

I have a 1990 Isuzu Trooper - I was looking into installing into the fusebox, but I cant seem to figure that out.

Solder it (eyelet to battery). Then fuse it within 6 inches or so on the hot side. Be sure it is shielded from ground in case of engine flex and such.

Run at least one or two good grounds to the frame.

-don't solder it to the battery, solder the eyelet connector that slips on the bolt that screws into your battery, onto your hot lead. It's basic stuff.

May I suggest you run down to your local car stereo shop and have a look around? Maybe even ask them a few questions. Be sure to fuse both lines at the battery. Use #12 as a minimum, voltage drop is large at 12 volts over a short run of wire.

My cheap $5 mike sounds better on echolink then the expensive Heil mikes people are using. I was just chatting with AE 152. I've chatted with Jim H. before, and had tried to make contact with Ozark Dave before he passed away. Now I've got Skype with video running. It's got 16 bit audio and it sounds like FM compared with echolink's 8 bit AM sounding audio. Plus Skype is full duplex. I'm using my 8mm camcorder connected to my ATI TV Wonder card. Last Thursday, I was viewing and was viewed on amateur television using the wonders of the internet.

I want my own ATV transceiver. It's not cheap. $500 just for the box. http://www.hamtv.com/ . Something for everybody on ham, and I can still use my CB. I was on it last night. Time to watch COPS. bye.

That's over here. I'm running a 2 meter mobile, a 440 HT, a scanner monitoring fire dispatch and echolink or skype going. When I hear an exciting call, I turn on my trunktracker and follow the action.

I can't get my antennas outside, so I ingest all the RF at 5 watts.

I've lost track of how many radios I've got. It must number 40 something.
(scanners, ham radios, CB's, FRS, shortwave, etc) I've been in the radio hobby since birth! One can collect a lot of stuff. I've got 5 PC's in here all 100BT networked. Over 400GB of online storage and another 200GB offline in a pile of good, filled hard drives. Plus, add tools, test equipment and other electronic goodies. Did I mention piles of old PC parts?

I've got to switch my KVM to my bittorrent machine and drop another .torrent into uTorrent and get that one started.

Does a Regency Range Gain 23 channel tube radio count as a boat anchor?

I need a power transformer rewound for a Fisher X-101-B. It's a fuse popper even with the secondaries removed from the amp. It's got the original Fisher output tubes in it.

Sure.

Just take a pencil, and where it says "50 Mhz" on the front panel, write in "27 Mhz". Everyone knows that all linear amplifiers work equally well on all bands and that suggesting otherwise is just a market ploy to get people to buy more boxes.

Don't forget to drive it with your "tweaked" Galaxy, Connex or other "import" radio with the mic gain at 100%, fed with a pre-amplified microphone. And remember to tune for >>>MAX<<< SWR, >>>NOT<<< minimum.

And remember to use the international test calling signal:

"AWWWWWWWWWWW-DE-OOOOOOOOOOOOOOOH..."

"AWWWWWWWWWWW-DE-OOOOOOOOOOOOOOOH..."

You'll probably need to add inductance, maybe reduce capacitance in

To lower frequency from 50MHz to 27MHz you need and / or bigger inductance and bigger capacitance.

Fine candidate for A ham license we have here.

Lift the lid on the Isuzu, place the CB radio on top of the battery, then, with a 15 pound sledge hammer, hit the top of the CB as hard as you can, impaling the CB on the battery terminals. This will connect the CB to the battery for you. Good connection too. Might be some sparking.

I would try to get by with the existing variable caps at the early stage until you have got the thing sort of working. There may be a small tuned input circuit or there may be a passive resistor. To start, I would double the number of turns in the tank circuit of the final and in the input coil (if any) and tune the variable caps to see if there is any output. I used to use a light bulb to coax fitting to look at how close I was getting to resonance. Remember there is a lot of voltage on the final so discharge the power supply caps through a 100 ohm or so resistor each time you fiddle. This amp may be grid-driven so keep the tests very short to avoid burning up the grids. There are ways of getting the coil/capacitor values correct without using the final voltage if you let any of the smoke leak out of the resistors.

Hell, I'd just keep adding turns until the dingus quits shutting down.
Sniff for parasitics, adds caps as necessary.

IF CBers had a bit of discipline, courtesy, and knew more, as a whole, what they are doing, the noise could be decreased by quite a bit! ?But NO! ?EVERYbody has to have an amp to talk 2 miles down the road, or to the next truck right in front of him. ?Before the 70s, I used to lay on my bed with a BACK OF SET Radio Shack antenna and a Raytheon 5-channel CB and talk in a 5-8 mile radius. ?We had a regular round table most every night. ?Everybody was courteous, took turns, didn't use power, and we had no trouble talking--even when that roaring skip was in we could talk over it because those people weren't using extra power, either. ?When the BIG AMPS came along to replace self confidence lost I-don't-know-where, you couldn't talk a mile away. ?Now, more than ever, there are operators who think THEY have to out-talk the rest in order to feel powerful and replace the "leaking" testosterone. ?Hey, I don't have a magic answer because you and I both know that it \won't stop without some serious enforcement. ?It still boils down, nonetheless, to the fact that those truckers have those 40 channels that they can use legally. ?The hams have the 10 Meter band via licensure. ?It STILL isn't the hams' fault that those channels are screwed up, nor does it justify stealing frequencies from the rightful users--whether they are occupied or not.

I do have something of a solution, but nobody would like it. Put CB up on FRS and MURS where there is little occasion for skip, and the truckers wouldn't be bothered with all that noise. Form associations and use voluntary bandplans to separate users, so that interfer ence would be kept to a minimum. Yeah, we know that wouldn't be met with joy, don't we? We want to work "DX", play with BIG POWER, and complain about how we can't talk without our amp.
I don't mean to be ugly, but that's what it amounts to. Really, you can't have it both ways! That is truly what needs to happen; because the general public is NOT radio savvy, VHF/UHF is where CB needs to be to prevent all those "turf" wars, skip, and racket. It WOULD make a difference. Not likely to happen soon. Still, never say never.....

Find a point on the fuse block that is turned on with the key, this will prevent leaving it on problem. Hook up the power wire Red one to this and ground the black wire to a good ground, most likely there is a point under the dash. The normal CB does not draw that much current so a direct battery connection is not necessary.

With all due respect, the OP asked...
"they told me I should "open my cb". What does that mean? What does it do?"

If the guy does not know what it means and what it does, he really is best leaving the radio as standard... working.
I knew someone who was always in his radios. Whenever he got a new radio he tweaked until he buggered it up. He then sold it cheap to some "rig doctor" and got another... which he then did the same with.

Once the radio is "opened up", any warranty has gone along with the legally required type approval for the radio... it becomes illegal, if it still works. It may start to cause interference, leading the authorities straight to the owner's door. In America, I believe the fine is rather steep. Here in the UK, it is set by a court. Under DTI plans, Ofcom will become able to give on the spot fines for illegal CB in the UK.

If, knowing those facts, the guy still wants to play inside his radio, then that is his choice and his risk.

I know that some of you guys love to tweak your radios, put all sorts of gadgets on them, pump up the power and go to the nearest "keydown" but, believe it or not, there may be some people out there who just want to use a CB for it's intended purpose :~)

Regards,

Peter.

Forget it, Scott...Morkie is drawing welfare for a "disability", and any demonstration that he can do something to overcome his "disability" means he'd have to come off welfare and get a real job.

He DOES claim an IQ of 248, though...Makes ya wonder what all that "MENSA" silliness is about with intellects like Morkie, doesn't
it...?!?!

Sure you can use a spellchecker and post here.

You've only been provided two dozen different ways to do it.

No, I was not lying.

And I am not lying about your "disability". To idiot and moron we add thief and fraud.

For those of you just getting to know "Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ" via his spamming and cross-posting of RRAP and other "rec.radio" groups, a little intro is due.

Mark started in here about 8 years ago with his functionally illiterate diatribes, mostly trying to get support for his "waivers" for Morse Code due to alleged neurological deficits, among which he alledges being "dyslexic".

The problem is Morkie tried to get an allergist to write his "waiver" for him. After having claimed an IQ of over 240, one has to wonder on what two fingers he added that up on. It was suggested he see a neurologist, but like every attempt to help him, he told those who suggested it to get ####ed.

On finding out that I was an enlisted retiree from the USMC, Morkie started in on tales of how >>>HE<<< was not only an officer, but a COLONEL in the US Army "chemical corps", and that he was DRAFTED ta-boot!...As if that meant a rat's pack of snot in this forum!

Of course Morkie didn't count on anyone actually being able to do math better than he...You see, based upon his birthday (which was once in QRZ), Morkie would have only been SEVEN years old when the drafted ENDED in the United States...

Anyone seeing a pattern here?

When he was busted with this fact, he then relented and "admitted" that he was "only" a lieutenant, but that his unit CO wouldn't let him resign even though he's an admitted sexual deviate. Of course he's since changed even THAT story, and he now tells a tale of how he was an enlisted clerk in the Army, discharged for emotional problems.

Yeah...Right. A "clerk" who can't even SPELL "clerk"... ! ! ! !

Over the past several years, Morkie has alternatively denied being a mental health patient, then admitted that he's being treated for "anger issues". He's also lied about being in trouble with the law...You see, Markie likes to "care" for his elderly father by taking advantage of him, then skirting the law. It's been a close shave.

Now Morkie's moved from his previous QTH in south-central Illinois to the Michigan Upper Penninsula in order to (A) avoid the aforementioned abuse issues, and to (B) take advantage of more lenient welfare laws that allow him to pork out at home while allowing you and I to "earn" his income for him.

Among his many NG credits are his claims of being stalked, his admission (and only redeeming attribute) that he not only lies, but does so without moral reservation, and that he believes that children should be TAUGHT to lie.

Morkie now "claims" to be married, but can't seem to produce any evidence of it, other than to point to the recent licensure of a female-sounding named person who shares his POB in Chassell, Michigan.

Oh yeah...His "wife"...Allegedly a law clerk or paralegal of some sort, they were allegedly married in Israel. No doubt a green card scam if they are indeed "married". Obviously she doesn't care enough about him to take his name, even to have it hyphenated with hers.

So ...for those of you just tuning in, sit back and enjoy the flailings of Mark C. "I Am A Drafted Gay Pagen Chemical Corps Officer" Morgan.

He never disappoints!

another lie

I never said I was being treated for anything anger issues or not >He's also lied about being in trouble with the where?

never been in trouble with law, except the occional speeding ticket

Now Steve did falsely alleg I was abusing my Old man, and it was investagted and I was cleared

Illiopis township includes the exact center of the state of Illinois by some measure (by others a neighorring township does bu steve never lets facts interfer in his lies)

yes indeed I do belive that all person should lie in the right circumstance

Steve reported me to child abuse authorities and they agreed ..with me obviously

what is the problem with that?

are you antisemitic as well?

no doubt in your mind, but reality is different she as well as myself are US citizens we choose to travelto Isreal for our Marriage and Honeymoon

well I thank you one her behalf for once calling her a she rather than a he

but we simply choose to live our lives as we see fit without consulting the likes of Robeson and indeed there we have the one "crime" I am guilty of, being different something that Robeson can't stand for in even the slightest degree... and I do far beyond the slightest degree I admit

Amps, whether certified or not will end up as they always do,,,,,,used on 11 meter and the freeband in addition to the hammie bands, regardless of what the FCC does or doesn't do.

Haven't had much luck on triple five lately,,,you been sandbaggin there lately? Most of my action has come from ssb recently. Send me an email and let me know next time you're working some dx near Dixie. Take it light and try to fly under the radar.

K1MAN EDITORIAL - ED060316A -

K3VR IS A HYPOCRITE

Old Brian holds himself out to be an A-1 amateur radio operator. But his reaction to a legitimate complaint* regarding criminal amateur radio interference by, for example, KZ8O (former ND8V), is not outrage against KZ8O but rather outrage against the station interfered with, K1MAN. Interesting! Brian has just totally destroyed his claimed amateur radio credibility.

Brian is a staunch supporter of ARRL. KZ8O is a staunch supporter of ARRL. ARRL is silent on this issue. The FCC, so far, is silent on this issue. Do you see a pattern here? Interesting!

It looks like Brian is not much of a ham after all. He is more interested in "nailing" K1MAN for something, anything, rather than FCC rules or United States law. Or, Brian is just plain stupid!

Brian is not THAT stupid. He is simply acting like a spoiled kid in kindergarten. His juvenile emotions simply over ride his adult intelligence; often seen with kids in school. Get a grip, Brian! You usually make a total fool of yourself. ARRL and the FCC are not very far behind!

FORMAL FELONY COMPLAINT

In the matter of

Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN
Registered Professional Engineer Licensee of Amateur Radio Station K1MAN

against

Michael E. Guernsey, Sr.
Licensee of Amateur Radio Station KZ8O

Complainant, Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, hereby makes this affidavit from his own personal knowledge and says that:

Complainant began his amateur information bulletin service at 1400 UTC on the clear frequency, 14.275 MHz., on 13 March 2006. On or before 1544 UTC, amateur radio operator Michael E. Guernsey, Sr., KZ8O, caused intentional interference to amateur radio station K1MAN in criminal violation of federal law, namely Sections 333 and 501 of the 1934 Communications Act:

Section 333:

No person shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radiocommunications or any station licensed or authorized by or under this act or operated by the United States government.

Section 501:

Any person who willfully and knowingly does or causes or suffers to be done any act, matter or thing, in this Act prohibited or declared to be unlawful, or who willfully or knowingly omits or fails to do any act, matter or thing in this Act required to be done, or willfully or knowingly causes or suffers such omission or failure, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for such offense, for which no penalty (other than a forfeiture) is provided by this Act, by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both.

At 1546 UTC K1MAN changed transmitting frequency to 14.272 MHz. to get away from this criminal radio interference.

And was this "information bulletin" one of the following?:

o ARNewsline
o the Rain Report
o the HandiHam newsletter
o the ARRL letter
o This Week in Amateur Radio

If it wasn't, it was probably another one of Glenn's self-aggrandizing broadcasts.
As you know, one-way broadcasts are verboten on amateur radio. (Sec. 97.113(3)(5b))

No where in the FCC rules does it state that an Information bulletin has to be a newscast. All those you mentioned are newscast. The rules only state it has to be "solely of subject matter of interest to the amateur radio service" (see below)

97.3 Definitions
(a) The definitions of terms used in Part 97 are:

(25) Information bulletin. A message directed only to amateur operators consisting solely of subject matter of direct interest to the amateur service.

§97.111 Authorized transmissions.

(b) In addition to one-way transmissions specifically authorized elsewhere in this Part, an amateur station may transmit the following types of one-way communications:

(6) Transmissions necessary to disseminate information bulletins;

It's funny that people only read 97.113 and not the rest of the rules including the definition

(10) Broadcasting. Transmissions intended for reception by the general public, either direct or relayed.

If the transmission is directed to the general public it's a broadcast, if it's directed to the amateur service and consist solely of subject matter of a direct interest to the amateur radio service then it's legal.

No where in the FCC rules does it state that an Information bulletin has to be a newscast. All those you mentioned are newscast. The rules
amateur radio service" (see below)

97.3 Definitions
(a) The definitions of terms used in Part 97 are:

(25) Information bulletin. A message directed only to amateur operators consisting solely of subject matter of direct interest to the amateur service.

97.111 Authorized transmissions.

(b) In addition to one-way transmissions specifically authorized elsewhere in this Part, an amateur station may transmit the following types of one-way communications:

(6) Transmissions necessary to disseminate information bulletins;

It's funny that people only read 97.113 and not the rest of the rules
including the definition

(10) Broadcasting. Transmissions intended for reception by the general public, either direct or relayed.

If the transmission is directed to the general public it's a broadcast, if it's directed to the amateur service and consist solely of subject matter of a direct interest to the amateur radio service then it's legal.

"solely of subject matter interest to the amateur radio service."
Broadcasts of, by, about, from, and to K1MAN are of no interest to anyone

These so called "FORMAL FELONY COMPLAINTs" are totally bogus!
K1MAN has no authority to so.
Read what the FCC had to say about this back in 2001:
December 11, 2001

Mr. Glenn A. Baxter
RR 1 Box 776
Belgrade Lakes, ME 04918

RE: Warning Notice--Amateur Radio license K1MAN
Dear Mr. Baxter:

The Commission has information that you have sent numerous so-called "Standard Felony Complaint Affidavits" to various Amateur Radio licensees that you perceive to either cause interference to your Amateur Radio station K1MAN or do not relinquish to you the frequency on which they are operating. Inasmuch as you have successfully completed an examination for an Amateur Radio license, you should be aware that all Amateur frequencies are shared. You have no greater rights whatsoever to an Amateur Radio frequency than any other Amateur Radio operator.

We also note that on January 5, 1994, the United States Attorney for your jurisdiction, Jay P. McCloskey, warned you about the mailing of such "Standard Felony Complaint Affidavits" and stated:

DO NOT send any more Standard Felony Complaint Affidavits to our office. The interference you allege, even if intentional, is not a federal criminal offense over which our office has prosecutorial jurisdiction.
The letter from United States Attorney McCloskey also referenced letters that you had sent other Amateur operators alerting them of supposed criminal charges instituted by McCloskey's office. In his letter to you, McCloskey stated:

It is against the law to write and mail this type of threatening communication, especially when it has no basis in fact. If you continue sending this type of letter, you may be subject to federal criminal charges for misrepresentation and for using the mails to make threats. You may also jeopardize your Amateur license.

You are advised that any attempts to threaten or intimidate Amateur Radio licensees operating on the Amateur bands will reflect adversely upon your qualifications to remain a Commission licensee, and will be the subject of a license revocation or renewal hearing.

I wouldn't want to drive my Jeep in there. I might get bogged down in the mud!

Radio, lets see, echolink (AM) or skype (FM) with video tonight...
My biggest complaint about echolink is that all the calls with a 3 in them are grouped together, even if the 3 call is not in 3 land.
There needs to be an update that allows one to designate which area they're really in. I can't stand seeing FL, CA and HI and can't find the ones that have moved here and kept their 2 or 9 call.

Residential complaints are handled in such a way that the FCC will work to asure that the cause of interference is not on the complaintant's end. The process is slow and long.

Once determined that the complaintant has done all they can then the FCC will act to find the source of interference. Then also one has to consider who is complaining. Live close enough to the flight path of a major airport and interfere with landing and takeoffs of jets, then the FAA is the complaintant. The FCC then reacts quicker than someone complaining that their TV is interfered with.

It is all a matter of who is complaining and what service is being interfered with.

your know this paragraph and the leter it comes does not state that threatening of or intimidation Ham has to occour over Ham radio with stev et all threatening YOU over your bullitens over the net prehaps there is a basis for complainig to the FCC to try and Steve

I've got some audience cassette masters from Merriweather Post over here that need to be captured as 16 bit stereo waves, chopped with CDWAV and then compressed to FLAC and torrented.

even if one person like listening to his show and continues to listen to his show, then it would fall within that catagory because it is something to interest to a lease one member of the amateur radio service.

You'll need broadband and a bittorrent client. Here's a teaser:

---- Steve Earle & The Del McCoury Band ----

Steve Earle - Guitar, Vocals
Del McCoury - Guitar, Vocals
Rob McCoury - Banjo
Ronnie McCoury - Mandolin
Jason Carter - Fiddle
Mike Bub - Bass

Farm Aid '98, New World Music Festival, Chicago, Illinois

date : Oct 3, 1998, Length 25 mins

DVD 720x480 NTSC, Audio AC-3 192, simple menu and correct chapter points song 1 : Texas Eagle song 2 : I Still Carry You Around song 3 : Hometown Blues song 4 : Love Is A Long Road (The Del McCoury Band) song 5 : Yours Forever Blue song 6 : My Old Friend The Blues song 7 : Carrie Brown

Steve Earle & The Del McCoury Band appearing at Farm Aid '98 held that year in Chicago this is what was shown on TV
it's an edited performance apparently they played a couple more songs not shown on TV (The Mountain) was one of them.
The video quality is only B but the audio is ok I had been hoping someone would seed a mint copy but nothing ever appears so maybe this is more rare than I thought ..... time will tell !

a JPG with some screen snapshots can be viewed here

That's good music but he was only scratching his bluegrass itch with him, Del kicked him out of the band because he says too many cuss words at the live shows. (true story)

Look for something from Copperhead Road or Transcendental Blues, or, I Feel Alright. You might like what he has to say about things in general.

Good to go with broadband, captain. :)

There are sites for everything. This one is only legal lossless music files, no executables. They don't keep track of what you download. (no records are kept)

Make sure you download your client from the source. There are packaged versions with spyware. I can point you to clean versions.

I'm a bit leery of some of that stuff lately, mostly because one of my Stay away from the sites with the copyright violations. Most have been shut down lately anyway. I only share the legal stuff.

Anything that's been officially released is banned. Many torrents get banned because one track has been released.

It's so magic, that my Radio Shack 5/8 wave 2 meter antenna came with 18 feet of that magic shitty RG-58. It it didn't have a special connector on the antenna side, I'd have replaced it. It does work better since I removed it from the magnet and drilled a hole and mounted it properly.

As an aside, now it can't be knocked over by branches or by removing snow.

I live in Louisiana and have 1 of 3 No Name 32lb Mauls built by Aaron with a plexiglass top. It was bought on April 3, 2000 from a guy in New Jersey. More of these units may have been built since then. I don't know. But in any case, I would like to sell it now because I see that I'll never have enough money for this hobby to set it up in the mobile. Anyone seriously interested, please contact me by email.

Programbo is a very common name. "programmer" + "rambo"...get it? There

RF drag-racing may be your pleasure but you'd be better off taking an actual maul to those no-bias Class C amplifiers than unleashing them on your community without first checking them with a spectrum analyzer to see how many megahertz they destroy.

If one person continues to listen to his program, then it's an interest to someone in the amateur radio service. There is no real specification on how many people are require to listen to an information bulletin to deem it "an interest to the amateur radio service" and the courts would tell youhe samething. If even one person listens to it, it's an interest to someone in the service.

The amps keep getting bigger and dirtier, there are a lot more of them, and the operators are getting more careless in their engineering and content of their transmissions. RF pollution is becoming a bigger issue all the time, and when these amps can be heard on non-RF equipment, the pollution they create is becoming more visible to the non-CBer.

The FCC enforces their laws when there is a complaint. They are very aware of the abuses that occur on and around the CB, and if it continues, it will only be a matter of time until new laws are drafted. My concern is that the new laws may include the temporary or permanent shut-down of the CB.

In other words, a few people are fing it up for all of us.

That'll be the day. Twisty's not fit to kiss Frank's jock strap. Allow me to educate you keyclowns on the operation of an RF transistor.

Current flows from emitter to base but is blocked from base to emitter. That's the basic idea behind rectification. In order for current to flow, however, you need a bias potential. In a ground-base bias scheme, that bias potential comes from the signal. When the signal is below 0.65V (the required bias potential) no forward bias exists, and no current flows. Since this is a ground-bias amp, the signal that is not amplified is the signal BELOW 0.65V; and since 50% of the signal is below ground, the total amount of signal that goes unamplified is the signal below ground PLUS the signal between ground and 0.65V. That's more than 50%, so the conduction angle -- the amount of signal that WILL be amplified -- is going to be LESS THAN 50%. This is fundamental, and it happens regardless of the size of the input signal or the state of saturation of the transistor, because the state of saturation has no reverse effect on the bias potential of the BE junction -- it is simply maxed out on it's current flow. At saturation, the current is relatively constant with respect to the voltage, and any increase of the input potential will only RAISE, not LOWER, the voltage on the base because of the increasing resistance. This does not change the conduction angle because when the transistor falls back out of saturation everything returns to normal, and the cycle continues as before.

Why Keyclowns Fear N8WWM And His AKC Organization

6 years ago, the rec.radio.cb newsgroup was a keyclown sanctuary and a training ground for criminal CBers. Amp sellers, golden screwdrivers, loudmouths, tweakers,
drug dealers, and know-nothings ran free.
There was no tech discussion, aside from "who's amp is loudest". CB myths like 18 foot coax length were taken as gospel. CBers were told to open up their radios and mess around inside, encouraged by so-called experts.

These so-called experts didn't tell the new CBers that by expanding their radios, they might be on ham frequencies or even air sea rescue channels. They didn't tell them that the Skullcracka or XForce amps they so dearly loved would interfere with other radio services. They didn't care.
It was not so much a radio hobby but a criminal lobby. No one questioned keyclownism and the sissy homosexual values that went along with it.

The mighty N8WWM changed all that.

With his timely, powerful, and brilliant action,
he initiated the eBay auction ratouts, ridding the nation of dangerous keyclown gear. He reported keyclown sales websites to the FCC. He predicted the problem of 10 meter trucker bootleggers before most law abiding CBers and hams even knew about it. He reminded keyclowns daily that they were subhuman federal lawbreakers. &#65533;

Working alone, he built the AKC from the ground up, trained its members, and set their course for the future. But in doing so, he paid a price - he became the focus of keyclown attention and the main target of RF thugs and gay fairies the world over.

Each year hundreds of CB keyclowns whimper and drool over photos of N8WWM, mooning over his superior genetics and handsome appearance, wishing they could be heterosexual like him, but knowing they are doomed to the despair-pit of homosexual girlish queerness. This warped man-lust drives a few keyclowns clinically insane, and some make a desperate pilgrimage all the way to Ohio in hopes that they might get a glimpse of their love object.

This emotion also drives these same-sex-crazed limp-wrists to forge N8WWM. In their keyclown hearts, they WISH he were gay like them. They WISH he were a dedicated criminal like them. They WISH...but their wishes never come true.

They can do nothing. They are powerless.
They are keyclowns.

We have N8WWM to thank for this. Someday there will be a plaque at ARRL headquarters honoring this great man. "He stopped keyclownism at our gates", it will read. Future generations of hams will honor N8WWM, for he stemmed the tide of gayness and exposed the criminality of keyclowns.

A toast to the mighty N8WWM!

2710. Keyclowns Are Desperate People

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2006-03-19 07:06:01 UTC
From: All_Hail_The_Mighty_N8WWM@comcast.net Message-ID: <tp7Tf.182387$US.12207@news.ono.com>
Source record: 211096

You have to understand the motivation behind mopey's visits. Keyclowns are desperate people...they do not have the mental faculties to tolerate being bugged about their keyclownism. It makes them upset because they have to hear dissent. Steveo is the poster child for this attitude. He simply cannot take it when somebody gives him crap about being a keyclown.

This atttude has no doubt been developed by a lifetime of crying and whining to get his way. It started in his childhood, when he whined and cried in supermarkets and malls to get candy or toys. When his parents indulged him in these situations it reinforced the idea in his young mind that if he yelled and cried to get his way that he should always get it.

As he became a young adult and found that life had to be met on life's terms, not his, he railed at the injustice of it all. Teen years immediately before this stage found him in a constant state of barely controlled rage and often acting out in his frustration. Typical of such incidents are punching people who cut him off in traffic, yelling obscenities out car windows, and showing no consideration for others.

Such is the mentality of a keyclown. RF spectrum, to a keyclown, is nothing more than a wide open space to play in. If this were a private yard or a public place belonging to all taxpayers, the evidence of keyclownism would be obvious. The place would be uncaringly trashed with garbage and the observed attitude would be "So what if it is a mess, you wanna MAKE me clean up after myself, sucker?"

The visits to peoples' homes are an expression of this frustrated, thwarted, angry personality. Mopey tries to make someone conform to his ideas of what should be in the NG by making threats and visits. To mopey, the worst thing on earth would be if the AKC knows his address, and his logic is that him knowing AKC addresses should strike fear in their hearts. You see, when he visits with his 12 gauge digicam the AKC should shake. They do...with laughter.

The fact that mopeydopey shows himself to be a disturbed individual in these visits does not dawn on him. This is because he is not inhabited with the normal sense of right and wrong. His opinion, like that of all keyclowns, is that whatever he wants to do is OK, and if someone disagrees then he has the right to attack them, physically or otherwise. This affliction is commonly called a sociopathic disorder.

The very fact of posting this message will bring a barrage of name calling, threats, and other things that keyclowns believe are effective. They think they are effective because they are effective at riling THEM up. This attitude is consistant with keyclownism's main root causes: the fact that keyclowns are only aware of what they want and have no concern for others, coupled with a total inability to tolerate even the most basic forms of disagreement.

The reactions to this post will prove the thesis as presented. Keyclowns are simple creatures, and always behave in a predictable manner.

About as serious as the description!

"Ham Radio CB Transceiver"

Umm, yeah, right.

Is it a CB or a ham radio? Looks like a ham radio to me.

That's got real good shielding for an RF buckshot producer!
It's shit like these amps that make my CB useless. I can talk all I want but I can't hear anything because of the noise.

I'm not against amps. I'm against improper use of amps.
I've still got a small BIASED unit in my mobile, right next to my CB and 2 meter radio.

After an exciting 2 day honeymoon in the back room of a CB shop, Scottiekins, twistie and tnom are enjoying married life at home now. The honeymoon would have been longer, but the CB shop owner threw them out after he saw certain body fluid stains on his stash of leenyers. Another problem ensued from the racket caused by the tripped out trio as they raved over the roger beepers and power mikes.

"You aint sposedta use 6LQ6 tubes as sex toys, and them boys know that!", said Joe Pumpemup, the CB shop owner. As Pumpemup looked over the litter of broken export rigs and burned out modjee boxes he exclaimed "Them boys wuz worse than a durned FCC raid!"

The freaksome threesome were not available for comment, as tnom and twistie had hurriedly rushed Scottiekins to a nearby hospital to be treated for foriegn object insertion strains to his lower bowel.

Their landlord, the same one who rented the trailer next door to Paula Jones, told this reporter "Them boys aint runnin' no base station there, I done told 'em I monitor channel 19 and I aint puttin up with splash in my trailer park." Reportedly, Scottiekins and crew are gonna be looking for a house with a TV tower already there so they don't have to buy one for the Antron 99. They are rumored to have instructed a real estate agent that the new house also had to have a flush toilet, as they want to move up in the world. They also had a requirement for 220 volt wiring, as tnom has rewired the primary side of the power supply in the old gray 12 tube Phantom so the lights wont go dim.

According to the FCC, N8WWM, Doug Adair committed several violations over the air at the expense of the Toledo Amateur Radio Club by utilizing their repeater to break the law. The amateur club received a warning letter from the FCC concerning Adair's violations and were told to take steps to make certain the violations by Adair will not be repeated. Adair not only hurt the entire image of amateur radio with his inexcusable behavior, but damaged the reputation of yet another entity trying to further the good of amateur radio. It's a shame when bad apples like these make it so clubs can't even trust their own users to abide by the rules they were sworn to uphold. Adair is also an infamous presence on the internet. A google search of "N8WWM" reveals a peek into the world of the individual identified as Adair. In addition to FCC violations, Adair has, in the past, been accused of being a prolific spammer, breaking several internet laws and violating several terms of service agreements with internet providers.

I don't read government propaganda.
The FCC may make a few token busts, but the fact is they don't have the resources or desire to regulate 11 meters.
Did you ever wonder why there are so many export radios and splatter box amps in the U.S.? Look in any CB shop or on the internet and you can buy them all day long. Uncle Charlie just looks the other way, and probably gets payola from the manufacturers.

You dweebs are the ones who should get a life. You can't take the intellectually superior and superbly accurate words of the MIGHTY N8wwm. What a bunch of little crybabies. "Mommy, that mean hammie N8wwm said we were ILLEGAL, lets kick him off usenet...Please mommy, please!"

Hey Scottiekins, did you and tnom and Twistie have a nice honeymoon? I heard PunishHIZbootie and 1mangayboy were there for the orgy. Are their little pee-pees dinky naturally, or did you just suck 'em down to a nub? I strongly suspect the latter is the case.

Haven't seen you guys online much, I figured that you were jerkin' off on yer Sparkomatic and ILLEGAL 2 pill amplifier.

The MIGHTY N8wwm is invincible and dedicated to making you face the illegality of your actions.

By the way, next time your momma wants to come over, please tell her to take a shower and also to douche. You might like sniffin' that odor, but I do not. Also, tell her to wear her false teeth next time. The gumming action is fine, but it does not look real good.

The MIGHTY N8wwm...Hated & feared by ILLEGAL CB twerps...And LOVING it! Special "howdies" to Scottiekins, Twistiekins, 1mangayboy, NeboDweebo, cd<BKA complete dork>, SwangHISThangman, Phoneyboy the butt pumper, and PunishMYbootie413! You Cat box lickers!

So you use splatterbox amps? Why? To make gay contacts? Everyone knows only gay men use CB amps. So you must be gay. That proves it.

2753. KEYKLOWNS EAT DRIPPING DONKEY DICK

A long, long time ago
twithed still remembers how his daddy used to made him suck
he knew if he had his chance for gay sex he'd drop his pants and get his pooper reamed out for a while

Sucking cock makes twhithed quiver shakes him to his lily liver fagness in the truckstop
as twhithed eats that dick glop Twhithed fag will whine and cry
but the anti-boys will never die and keyclowns will suck both far and wide until the CB dies...

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks em til he dies.....
Twit sucks em til he dies....

twithed loves a gay sex slave and writing in sporadic waves and his bible is play girl
he believes in anal hole and licking on a jizz filled pole he'll teach ya how to suck reeeeeeal slow

now we KNOW twithed's in love with dick just watch him kneel and start to lick he stops his drugs and booze to slurp up that pulsing goo
he's a lonely fag ass gayboy suck with a camper shell on his pickup truck wow the truckers sure are all in luck
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks em til he dies

Now for many years twits been a fag sucks cock each day until he gags and thats also how it used to be...

Twithed sucked for landshark queen and sideband too cuz he's so mean to that great hammie named N8

and while twithed bobbed up and down they all called him a fag keyclown dumb twithed never learns and his sphincter always burns and while train fag read from "CB Tricks" twit sucked 8 or ten more dicks look at how that punk ass licks...

The day the CB died...

And we were singin...hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ☐em til he dies.....

helter skelter in the summer swelter twit sucks hard cock in a city park shelter eight times a day and does it faaast!
He'll suck yer dick on the grass
you dont even have to make a pass cuz he loves throbbing dripping boner up the ass
the keyclowns whipped out their little bones and twithed licked ☐em till they moaned Chapwoman stuck his tongue out for a pulsing throbbing jizz gout

the FCC then took the field the keyclown fags just whined and squealed cuz 11 meters was repealed
the day the CB died....

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ☐em til he dies.....

The keyclown fags were all in one place
as twithed talked of saucers from space and that they had to start again so twit be nimble and twit be quick suck upon a truckers dick cuz jizz is a keyclowns only friend ☐ and as he watched amps melted down

he knew they were all ☐just fag keyclowns no more five five five no more keyclown jive
and as the flames climbed high into the night

they saw the end of their faggot fight and Riley laughing with delight
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks &#65533;em til he dies.....

FINAL VERSE

He saw Dweebo on drugs and booze and asked him for some happy news but he just smiled and said "I'm Gay"
He went down to the CB store
Where he first learned to be a gay sex whore
but the man there said that he was just too queer

And in the streets the children screamed
as the ran like hell from twisty queen
But no keyclowns were speaking no more CB's needed peaking

And the 2 men twithed sucked the most his father, and son, as he loved to boast they got busted and they were toast...
The day the CB died...

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks &#65533;em til he dies.....

So far, I haven't. Why do you suggest I do?

You see, Mork, I can call you an idiot, a fool, a liar, a deviate, CPI RANGE Plus Pre-Amplifier for Cb radio are they an good ?. I just bought one on ebay and am waiting for it to arrive by mail.

Does anyone here have any Spec's or Instructions they can post on the CPI Range Plus Pre-Amplifier ?.
Will the Range Plus - work on SSB or would it burn out the unit.

What? A keydowner big-amp guy who wears pink dresses? A transexual?
That means the keyclowns would have a gay member in their midst.
No wiggle room. Proof positive.

Save it. I haven't seen one of these models so I don't know how it's biased. The plexiglass worries me, though, since it doesn't provide much shielding in either direction. Neither does it help dissipate heat; in fact, the stuff works more like a blanket and keeps heat inside the case.

A preamp works on RECEIVED signals. It won't do a thing for TRANSMITTED signals. The worse thing that could happen is you could pop the keying transistor that switches the preamp out of line when you transmit. (or the detection diode the drives the keying transistor) You would want to put that before any amplifier. Expect any preamp to amplify the noise that you don't want as much as the signals you do want. Some are so broadbanded that you will overload your receiver and hear things that aren't there. You could also use it for your shortwave and VHF-LO on your scanner. If you're close to any transmitters, it may be unusable to you.

On sideband, unless there is a delay on the relay, it will chatter.

Johnny Cash gets most of the credit for this. I believe it comes off the Folsom Prison Blues album. The tune is egg sucking dog

Oh he's not very handsome to look at.
He's shaggy and eats like a hog.
And he's always stealing the foodstamps.
That dirty old dick sucking Doug.

Dick sucking Doug.
I'm gonna stop your head into the ground.
If you don't stop stealing them foodstamps.

It's a decent radio for use on CB or Ham radio. What's the real

That's fine, but you didn't need to post the binaries to the newsgroup. Not everybody has unlimited usenet feeds, and many sites automatically depeer from any newsgroups that have binaries in them. Congratulations: You hurt propagation!

It is the same here, someone must complain.
However, before they can get a visit, they must pay a dealer to take a look at their problem.
If the dealer cannot fix the interference, the person must get the relevant form and have it stamped by that dealer to prove they tried.
They must then send the form in - with payment for the investigation service.

I did once get a visit, as did other radio users in the area, when one neighbour complained of interference... on just one occasion. Back then, you could get though the system by "reporting" someone as running illegal equipment. However, they may have stopped that as it allowed people to avoid paying by reporting someone as illegal when it was because their TV was crap.

And, before the trolls start yelling, my equipment was checked over and the chap left happy and without any action of any kind. AFAIAA, no other radio user was busted for anything. The person had simply got around the system by screaming "illegal" without cause.

Still, with illegal equipment and modifications, the risks are always there... interference, knackered radio or falling out with neighbours. I believe that people should be aware of the risks then, if they do get problems, they can blame nobody but themself.

Regards,
Peter.

One doesn't need an amp to be heard on non-RF equipment, but of course, if you knew that, you wouldn't be here educating yourself via those in the know,

I'll go one step further and say that the FCC enforces radio laws
-only- when it is economically viable. At least that's what their enforcement history shows upon close examination.

As far as "big amps" are concerned, you can bet that the NSA keeps tabs on who owns what.

No, but programbo@aol.com is certainly the ONLY e-mail address. Of course you know nothing about how e-mail or internet works. This is proved by your inability to change your header of you@company.com

What is the point of new laws if they do not enforce the existing ones? Are there not already laws against bigass dirty amps on CB in America?
Can they not already order the shut-down of any transmitter considered to be causing interference to other services, is this not covered somewhere in the law?

Over here, they simply made it harder to complain. More red tape and more cost for the person suffering, but it gave the Radiocommunications Agency some peace. Government departments look after No1 first.

Peter.

I would hate to find out that some of those token drops were unaware of the facts - until they were busted.
As long as people know the risks, they only have themselves to blame if they end up being one of those token busts that are done purely to show some effort and scare people from illegal ways.

It's not just CB where such tactics are used. Here in the UK we have similar scare methods used with television licensing and benefit fraud. They have big advertising campaigns, including expensive TV adverts (the BBC or TVL will have to pay ITV, Channel 4 or Channel 5 at the going rate) and big posters.
They all say the same thing, that they will catch offenders.

TVL use the detector vans as a visible threat, although their effectiveness with modern TV has been questioned. Some believe they are empty vans, just a scare tactic. Aparently, TV detector vans cannot provide "evidence" for a bust, they merely scare the offender into owning up in the belief that they have been caught.
If the "technology" is as secret as TVL claim (even the development engineers cannot discuss methods with each other), then there is no way they can provide proof to a court that they really do work as claimed with 100% reliability.

Regards,
Peter.

Making judgements without hearing the evidence is called "prejudice".

>BTW, I found out you have been responding to my posts.

Oh, the humanity!

> You stated last year >that you killfiled me. Was that another lie, or do you crave the attention?

Just playing your ignorance. If you had bothered to check the headers of my posts you would see that I use Forte Free Agent -- the software has no killfile. As I have stated several times in the past, I use the term to communicate the concept that a person's posts are no longer worth reading. That doesn't mean I won't check them from time to time and see if the person has taken an IQ pill, and it's clear that you didn't. But what I -did- see was this:

"He stated, and I quote 'If you cannot get a cell signal you are unable to talk on 11m with 100 watts.'"

So I replied by asking you to cite your 'quote' but you hid behind your killfile excuse. I then changed my username to bypass your killfile and still no response; even when, according to you in the same thread, "...I have Frank on my killfile list and I still have to read his bullshit." Now I'm sure you can imagine my suprise to your 'recent' discovery that I have replied to your posts..... or is your imagination as limited as your critical thinking skills?

Ok, let's start with you citing the post where I state, "If you cannot get a cell signal you are unable to talk on 11m with 100 watts."

I would beleive that the FCC enforcement is somewhat selective.
Considering that they have to go to Congress with a tin cup and beg for appropriatiions and not have their budget slashed and burned.
Still it really depends on who complains and what the actual service being interfered with. I would imagine that the DoD would have influence on FCC enforcement activities followed by the FAA. CB radio service is most likely the lowest priority unless those on that service are interfereing with the higher priority services.

Post the evidence. I won't hold my breath as you do not have it. Your post

You stated that, not me. I only quoted you. You also stated that I should

The FCC has had to empower local law enforcement to deal with 11 meters. So far I do not know of anyone that has been busted by the police for CB crimes. The locals do not want the job. They are not even sure what the laws are concerning CB unless it interferes with emergency services, and even then they repot it to the FCC. Kind of an endless circle.

Based on your previous declaration that I am "full of shit as usual Frankie boy", I already considered myself to have been 'prejudged' (I still don't know why so many people can't even look up the word to get the meaning and usage correct -- almost like the word is from a

You have to look before you can find. Sat-phone salesmen don't come knocking on your door, and there's no need to limit your search criteria to your immediate neighborhood -- the internet is full of sat-phones for sale or rent.

....or were you just making more excuses?

How can you be so sure? Were you somehow privy to Bush's program of

You still can't grasp this 'prejudice' thing yet, can you? It's a simple concept..... -really- simple. For example, your recent post chastising someone you don't even know for being a "racist pig" is, by definition, prejudicial. Here's a link that might help fill one of the enormous gaps in your education:

Pretty soon it will be Master of Electrical Engineering..... work has BTW, the Gillinad thing is old and stale. How about using some of that imagination and call me names that are at least creative and original?

Earlier in this post I provided the link to the referenced thread.
Nowhere in there do I see anything radio related, let alone the quote you cited. And if you had checked the link I provided in the previous post (the thread where you create ridiculous situations to justify using an amp on the CB) you would see nothing from me about your posting habits -or- your alcoholism. Is there yet -another- thread that is disrupting your mental stability?

What excuses? If I said it then I'll admit it. But so far you haven't shown me where I said anything like what you are claiming. All you have done so far is make accusations based on gross misquotations and hatred, then telling me to google it to prove you wrong. Well, I did.

So I'll get back to my original question -- the same question that has been on the burner for several months now without an answer: In what post did I state, "If you cannot get a cell signal you are unable to talk on 11m with 100 watts"?

When you post it, it becomes everyone's business. If I have to read it, it becomes MY business.

What you fail to realize is that your ass is an exit. Your not supposed to put beer in it, or your finger or toy soldiers ect...

This thread has nothing to do with you. Did you even read the link or anything in this thread? How is my NOT discussing you stalking?
Let's look at facts.
I posted a link from a year or so ago about a disagreement with Frank. The link had nothing to do with you nor does it mention you in any way.
You then respond with "grow up".
I then ask "How does this possibly have anything to do with you Markie tard?"
You reply with "because I dilike staklers"

How the hell did you come to this conclusion based on these facts?

Lying about what?
I don't use my name because I don't want jock straps mailed to me. I don't want any idiots harassing my family. I don't want my identity stolen.
Afraid? Not in the context your thinking. I used to work in a maximum security unit. If you think I can't defend myself you are sadly mistaken.

Wow! From not posting his name to going on a "truely massive killing spree." Did you forget your meds today, or are you doing the enema thing before 5PM? Possibly both? Gee Markie, how did you come to the conclusion that anyone may be going on some Columbine type expedition? Do the shadow people live in your neighborhood?

You could run it on a 12V power supply, or even a car battery if you charge

The FCC does not have the manpower it needs to function. They've even outsourced license testing to unpaid volunteers. Enforcement is not something they can outsource to volunteers, the FCC just doesn't have the money (which is presumably why they're in favor of the tiered Internet idea[1], something we all should fight). This isn't something that's going to be fixed with more laws, the opposite will become true: FCC will be swamped with that much more work.

I still don't see the line you quoted. I do see that Frank was trying to explain to you that a cell phone was much more reliable for reaching the authorities and emergency services directly - rather than passing the message through anonymous freebanders and taking a chance it will be garbled.

Also he questioned your use of the term "radio dead zone". If you were in a radio dead zone that means that no signals get out. Yet you felt 100 watts on freeband would get out, even in this so called "dead zone". Frank told you to take a 3 watt cell phone and get to high ground. You preferred to stay with the CB and "leenyar".

When I first looked at his stuff, I didn't think it was his house. As I kept looking, I saw it was. I don't know why she lets him do that. He could use a couple of warehouses or such space.

I'm asking $40. They are heavy so shipping would be expensive. That's why I asked where you are. You can tell where I am. Another question, what do you intend to use for an antenna? A CB needs at least a 1/4 wave to get out. A back of set antenna, or a mobile antenna without a car won't cut it. An Antron 99 is a marginal half wave dipole that allows a l ot of signal to feed down the shield of the coax causing you and your neighbors a lot of grief when you bleed into the household electronics. A quarterwave groundplane would work better then an A-99.

A quarter wave at 27.185 MHz is about 8.5 feet. A 1/4 wave needs 18 feet of radial space around the base of it.

Building antennas at 11 meters are big items. 2 meter antennas are much smaller and easier to work with. (of course you'd need a ham ticket to use 2 meters)

To use the CB in the house as a Super-Base, You first need to put it in a microwave oven and run the oven for ten minutes on high power. This will harden the internal electronics so you can power it with household 110 volt electricity.

Next, Find an old AC 110V household power cord. Connect the red(+) wire from the CB Radio to one side, and the black(-) wire from the CB to the other one. House current is alternating current so it doesn' matter which is which you connect the wires to. Now, plug it into the wall.

Household power is much higher than the little twelve volts you get from a small car battery, So you should have a boomming signal. Also, put in 30 amp fuses in the fuse holders so your radio can use the higher power more effectively. When your radio starts smoking, you know you're getting out good. Use the instruction manual that came with the CB to wiff away the smoke if it gets too thick.

I seem to have made it all these many years dealing with people differant

Dood has a barn full.

I'd guess two meters ain't his favorite place to hang out with guys that actually have antennas in the air.

At any rate that guy is obsessed! hehe

I don't know Roberson, but I certainly won't take your word on his state of Normally I hate Pyramid products, but I have Gold series 25 amp 6-15 volt adjustable that works great. I got lucky at a pawn shop and stole it for $20.

They made it legal here to noodle for catfish. There ain't no way I'm sticking my arm in a catfish mouth or the holes where they hide.
I need to do a little squirrel hunting though. I think it's better than

No, as I explaind before, I worked around some of the worst criminals in the state. I know what people are willing to do and are quite edept at it. Even though I give you shit on this newsgroup, I do not wish you harm. But if you think crime does not exist you may be in for a rude awakening some day.

Twistedhed received a nasty filthy jockstrap from Doug. My 15 year old daughter gets the mail. Do you think I want her seeing shit like that. No doubt you would not understand as I am sure you have no children.

You need to look up lying in the dictionary as you tend to misinterpret everything as a lie. Posting against a retard like you does not require lying.

No, I stated concern for my family, not myself. You need to reread the post.

I meet and have worked with those types all my life and have never killed anyone. I don't like you, but I don't want to kill you. I do however enjoy making sport of you.

Back in my younger years I would get some assholes that would make threats.
They think they are safe behind the mic. You track them down and all of a sudden they are dead bolting the door. It's the same with the internet, they think they are safe behind the keyboard, but when the doorbell rings they crap their pants.

My shining moment in lawsuits was when I sued my own lawyer. He called me the night before court and payed me off. I carried a copy of that check for months.

Make sure you wear clothes you won't mind throwing away. You don't want crisco and his stench on your good boots. Remember to bathe in tomato juice to get the stink off.

You are welcome to come meet me at MIT, at which time I will engage you in fisticuffs, if you so choose.

In the words of the great Johnny Rivers, "you've given me a number, and taken away my name." However, the invitation to meet me at MIT still stands.
I'll be at Building E51 on 70 Memorial Drive. Ask for Dr. Fermi. Bring bandages, for I just may deal you a good thrashing.

Ever made deer jerky? I finally got my recipe right. Really sucks when people argue that you are lying with them that it is not beef! It's time consuming, but other than making sausage from venison, I really don't care too much for the taste. Of course, I wouldn't waste the backstrap that way! :-)

I simply don't bother on the furm

Hardly I merely point a fact

I never claimed you threatened or een seriously condered one, and yet you choose to lie and say I have

You pointed an implied threat of force to defnd your self against dealing with folks you don't like I pointed out correctly that no such use of force could be sucesfull with a massive killing spree I estimate based on your post that it would roughly 20 million people being killed to begin to total silence the folks you seem to be afraid of, a truly massive killing spree that is thankfull beyond your abilty to carry out even if you desire to do so.

It is hardly paranoid to notice the facts of the situation

you need to learn the meaning of the words you bandy about

Either he likes unstable operating systems, needs to able to directly access the hardware with old programs or he doesn't have a copy of Windows 2000. A lot of old games didn't run under 2000 either. All hardware and memory calls need permission from the OS under NT/2000/XP.

Hell no. I went to Windows 2K, which was great. Now I am at XP. I don't recall when was the last time I used 98SE. It was terrible.

I just spoke to Joe Rudi's (Oakland A's outfielder during the 1970's) station on a contest on 20M and 40M.

Check out his station and antennas !!!

He was a great defensive OF from what I remember, but that was toward the end of his career. Made a great catch in the 1972 WS. His station was booming in on 20M. I barely made the contact on 40M, but it counted.

We bought one of those dehydrators to make jerky. The wife has gotten really good at it. I have a place that makes jalapeno cheese sausage that is top notch.
I use the backstrap to make medallions, fry them up and deglaze with wine.

Let me repeat myself. If I wanted a private exchange, I would do it by e-mail. The point I made was you involved yourself in something you cannot comprehend and should keep your nose out of it. But since you insist on attracting my attention, I have no problem flaming you till the cows come

Yup, he had a murder trial to deal with on the same day as our small claim case was to be heard. I guess he didn't want a loss recorded on public record.

I'd love to hear the recipe for making jerky from chicken. I've used my dehydrator for making beef and pork jerky, but never chicken.

I still have it on this PC, win 98SE.
But it boots in Linux, and many win apps run in linux windows emulator wine.
Uptimes of 30 days and more are normal for my system.
But my scanner (paper scanner, not radio), and CD label printing soft works only in that win98SE.....
Hey even the tax office had Linux program for download for income tax, I used it.
So, MS software will likely be illegal soon in Europe.
Not that you could get a Vista anyways before Christmass
LOL
I find that radio site impressive actually, ver\y nice stuff there, do not have the space and money for that.
Really enjoyed the pictures.

Linux has ax25 and some nice packet radio soft too.

Hi all,

The Car and Deep Cycle Battery FAQ has been updated. The current version is 5.4, dated February 26, 2006 and can be found on www.batteryfaq.org. Answers to Frequently Asked Questions, tips, manufacturer's information, references and hyperlinks are contained on this free, consumer oriented Web site about car, motorcycle, power sports, truck, boat, marine, recreational vehicle, solar, and other starting and deep cycle applications.

The most popular sections in February were:

Battery Manufacturers and Brand Names List

FAQ Section 9 HOW DO I CHARGE (OR EQUALIZE) MY BATTERY?

Section 7 WHAT DO I LOOK FOR IN BUYING A NEW BATTERY?

Battery Information Links List

Section 4 HOW DO I TEST A BATTERY?

If you have time, please visit www.batteryfaq.org. If not please bookmark it for future reference. Questions, comments and suggestions for improvement are always welcome at info@batteryfaq.org.

Many thanks and kindest regards,

A ham ticket is free. The VEC can charge a few bucks as a testing fee.

Here's a quote from W5YI-VEC:
"Volunteer examiners are permitted to charge a fee to recover their out-of-pocket costs in administering an examination. The current examination fee is $14.00. Applicants may take as many examinations elements as they can successfully pass for the one fee. Another fee is charged to retake a failed examination."

There is a local club that doesn't charge for the tests. That's where I went.
I found it by accident when I decided to take the test. If they ever drop the code, I'll go back for my general and give them a donation for their efforts.

Cool. I collect the CPU fans. I have one bolted to the back of my 148 to keep the output transistors cool. I'm trying to think of a good spot to mount a pair to my 2 pill without the blades interfering.

I have an 88 Toyota Minnie Winnie that has an electrical problem. When I hook up the accessory battery up it kicks in and out. It works great with A/C but as soon as I attach the battery it acts up. I have no schematic for this which makes testing it a bit difficult.
Also the refrigerator doesn't get as cold as it should. It is propane operated but am unsure what is being used as a refrigerant and I believe it may be low on charge.

http://www.geocities.com/scott_unit_69/fans.JPG

My other IC-2100 has a fan just like the one on the left.
When contesting at 50 watts in the summer, you _NEED_ cooling!

I'm not bitching. I mearly pointed out that this thread had nothing to do with you. As you have claimed that I stalk you, it sure seems that anytime I post you feel the need to reply whether or not your name is mentioned. So don't lie about me stalking you, when you know damn good and well that you crave my negative attention.

You truly are delusional. Now you are comparing me with (in your spelling) Geobels. I assume you mean the minister of propaganda for the nazis. Or do you mean gerbles, like the one you had to have removed from your rectum at the ER.

While it may not have been word for word, after all it's been over a year

My heat sink fins are three inches deep. I'm thinking that I can take my dremel and cut into the fins so the fan or fans will be inset and out of harms way while still protecting the unit. I use mine at less than the maximum power anyway so I don't have heat problems in the house, but during the summer in the truck the temp can get up there in a hurry.

I find one minute of AM makes my amp hotter then 5 minutes of sideband.
The radio on the left runs FM. That's a constant 5, 10 or 50 watts.
I wish it had another mid power setting at 25 watts. Sometimes 10 isn't enough and 50 is too much. It's also been modified to do MURS.

The 667 has a few fins pushed over to grab the course pitch screws in the lower mounting holes. The finger guard is attached to the upper holes.
That amp is strapped and will draw a good 90 amps, about 1,250 DC watts!
That fan turns on when the power button is depressed. I switched the one on the Icom. I'm a real good sandbagger sometimes and cold air will blow after a few minutes of shutup time.

I would get rid of either the 5 or 10 watt setting (my choice would be the 10 unless that's what you use to drive the 667) and set it up for 25.

Yeah, I remember my 667, it would dim the headlights on AM.

I was thinking that you could turn it on/off thermally, but the less you add to it, the less that will go wrong.

Does constant kerchunking count as a repeater jammer. We've got some asshole over here that always kerchunks after after everyone's keyup so we get two courtesy tones. It's pissing me off and it's almost warm enough to do some tracking down. Portable beams are small on 2 meters and if you turn them horizontal you get even better directionality from them because you lose about 20db. When you get it pointed at someone, you'll know. Do this from two of three places, draw lines on the map and go directly to the right neighborhood. I'll take my camcorder to record the full scale reading on the input with no antenna and the RF gain turned back, then a closeup of the house number. I can be quiet for many hours while listening. I have a good idea of who it is. People are creatures of habit and do things the same time every day. That makes it even easier to plan for. Riley was in town today for a speech. I hope he did some monitoring and tracking while he was here. This guy has been really bad today with this. Maybe it's an out of towner and it will suddenly stop tomorrow after the big hamfest is over. May be an extra temporary asshole.

The regular butthead kerchunks, waits for the repeater to ID after 10 minutes and does it again. He thinks it's a game now. He won't be so happy when the club president and the trustee knock on his door, or he gets his certified letter from Riley. This guy also has played some very nasty rap with lots of cuss words. He _will_ be found, soon. He's pissed off the wrong person for too long with this BS.

Track him down and turn him in. As you stated, if he is not mobile, it won't be hard to do. Just goes to show that even a license holder (I assume he has one) can be an idiot the same as some CBers I know of. Just be careful, there are a lot of nuts in the world.

I intend to only get the needed information and let the important folks do their job. I spoke with the club president about it today at the hamfest.

He's all for me to find this asshole.

Wasn't sure if you had converted it to operate on other bands. And not being a ham I don't even know the wattage limitations on I think you said 2 meters.

Where did I say that? You seem to think that every post I make has something to do with you. I only stated you should keep your nose in your own buisness as the thread had nothing to do with you. You have posted enough in this thread to make it your buisness, therefore you are fair game for my amusement.

The pills are only good to 30 or 50 MHz depending on the part number.
The broadband transformers limit it even more so. I should take a picture of the inside of this busted HTX-212 and this 2 meter amp so you can see the difference in RF circuitry inside them.

> Soooooo, whats your recipe?

Liquid smoke

Soy Sauce

Sugar

Red Pepper and coarse ground black if you like peppered jerky

Mrs. Dashes' extra spicy seasoning

Morton's tender quick salt curing-dissolved in marinade (use 1/4 of what pkg says per pound)

Mix the above in desired amounts, and marinade for 24 hours minimum. Of course, you must remove ALL fat from the venison, but I usually save that and the small amount of meat that accompanies it for sausage. You must also remove the shiny covering that is between the muscles and covering the hams.

Smoking...fire up the smoker, and I usually use hickory or oak, or a blend of the two. Smoke ONLY until the meat turns grey and loses standing moisture. Remove it gradually as the pieces do not dry uniformly. At this point, put it into the dehydrator and dry to the desired level. Keep in mind that the final product will be dryer and less tender than it appears in the dehydrator due to it being warmed somewhat. Don't hesitate to run a test batch, as this was the hardest part for me to get right. I tended to over dry it!

What you will wind up with, in my opinion and others who have tried this jerky as well, is a very good jerky that will rival or usually surpass anything you can buy commercially.

Keep in mind tho, this is basically an all weekend endeavor, and must be watched very closely. Don't attempt it unless you have the time!

K1MAN is a great engineer and a great man. He is a credit to the State of Main unlike that Main ham with the dirty pictures at http://myrockport.com/ and http://myrockport.com/pen.jpg.

Somebody should get after him and his dirty pics instead of going after K1MAN.

This was a rambling posted in another group somewhere on the web:
(except for a name, I left everything intact, even the typo's)

...I've been under the care of two psychiatrists; one of whom IS a country dept. head, and I've on a medication management prog.
without interruption: for the last 25 years... So my comment RE: A govn't long-term study of Internet-maifested abnormal psych behaviors was not totally in jest.

What I find interesting is a realization that the identity of an individual who writes long-term on a site can be tracked/ observed not only electronically; but also by the writer's style/ voice/subject matter, among other things... This is a low-tech way that stalkers can continue to locate their Fixations. I've really tired of being latched onto by psychic-ticks; and I've equally had it with those who tell me I'm 'not outgoing enough'... Hence my rant.

I have been doing creative writing on the dead.net forum for nine years now and have written of a full range of emotions; from joyfilled and life-affirming to heartbroken and psychotic. I have have attempted to define not only my own emotional traumas but also sometimes that of people around me: online and in 3D. I have learned that I CANNOT employ different alia; I get 'out-ed' as to my true idenity as soon as I begin to write. I have no skill at deception in any aspect anyway.

I do my best not to describe others too explictly; I certainally do not employ proper names (except on occasion: a pubilc personality in a public situation) Very often I have found that an individual will recognize Themselves from my my vague wordings; and Become Convinced EVERYONE knows I am talking about Them... All too often these people become angry, and vengeful. Sometimes they carry their need for revenge into my 3D life. Poeple who read online writers for many years can also fall prey to the the same sort of over-personalization that fans can inflict upon rockstars ("He's my best-friend'...?hah)
Some readers begin to feel they 'Know' the Author 'so-very-well'; and develope unhealthy, unrealistic attachments to the writer as an individual, when is actuality there is No Relationship.

It is difficult for any person to write in a manner so terse, so very un-opinionated, so bland as to remain faceless for long. Eventually the writer's 'style' will creep in; even having 'no-style' becomes an Identifier. Geniality and unoffensiviness are the best cloaks to hide behind but Beware making too many comments in a short span of time or a Personality Patten will begin to form!

Those who are actively psychotic have noticeable characteristics to their communicatons. Be it in email, posting on a forum, in handwritten letters or in phone calls What they say/ How they say it: displays the splintering of pysche. I can tell when I get 'that way' by all of the above!

All people tend to employ certain words; Even the proverbial 'Man of Few Words' will repeatidly use a few key words/ phrases. Grammer usage; not so much as employing 'good grammer' but How Grammer is handled by the writer is another identifier. A writers' reaction to criticisms, and to hostile remarks are more markers for Persona.

Nine years ago; most of the laws now inforced regarding Unasked for, Undesired attentions, hateful comments and sociopathic online conduct had not been written or even thought of... Our communications systems are becoming more integrated daily. Electronic footprints follow us all. The WWW can/ does function as an excellent theraputic tool in self-recovery and mental wellness; but it should not function as a hiding place for crazy-folk. The only person they are hiding from is Themselves.

Really? What has doggie done to ADVANCE the amateur hobby?
Does he help get new amateurs on board. No. He scares them off.
Does he create some new cutting edge technology or improve some current techniques? No record of that happening. Does he offer to help at public service events. I can't answer that, but it's probably "no". If chasing amps and extra channels makes him feel like a "big man", that's not much of help to anybody...

Amateur radio is losing operators daily due to death and expirations.
In order to keep free radio communications available to all US citizens, it is imperative that new operators join the ranks. Seeing how cellphones and the internet keep folks away from ever learning about radio, it's a good idea to convince like minded folks to get their tickets and enjoy a few more bands. Not all hams are self-centered assholes, and there is something for everybody in amateur radio. So, doggie, stop acting like a butthead and do something useful. The list of things one can do with a tech ticket is too long to list, so I won't. You don't have to give up CB. It becomes another band to work and more operators to talk to.

Anybody else dare to take the step?

I know I was dead against it once. I still find assholes on the bands. I have plenty of other frequencies to use and I can always find non-assholes to talk to. Working the shifting conditions on other frequencies is neat.
Even 2 meters and 440 MHZ can open up to talk for hundreds of miles.

So why not Linux instead? It's not like you can't emulate Windows for the few things that don't have Linux equivalents.

Bad plan. Heat sinks depend on surface area to dissipate heat. They put fins on them to increase the amount of surface area. Cutting up your heat sink, thus reducing the surface area, will make your heat problem much worse instead of better.

It's not a machine-dependent problem. Windows 9x did not have any memory protection whatsoever, so any program could accidently overwrite any other program, including the OS, in memory. Combine this with the lack of testing endemic in Windows software, and the DLL hell from lack of decent shared object management, and you get the infamously unstable Windows.

At least shared object management has gotten slightly better in Windows over time, and WinNT/00/XP has (incompetent) memory protection, so it's not as bad as it used to be. However, it still can't hold a flame to the various unix variants (MacOS X, Linux, etc) for reliability and ease of maintainability over time...

It's not about to be introduced. It's called Vista, and if it's coming out this decade, it's looking like late 2007. The reason I say "If" is because out here in the pacific northwest, there are rumors that the Xbox, Windows and Office teams are considering going on strike.

So how do you get the NSA to send you that info. You just e-mail them and ask?
No, it's because you do not have evidence that the NSA keeps tabs on big amp owners.
Present proof that you have NSA info as you claimed, and not only will I NOT

I have stated that I am a freebander in many posts. I have obviously admitted to owning amps as I posted a topic on the EB63 I was building.
My statement had to do with being in a remote area and using an amp to get help as I had no cell signal. Yes it's against the law according to the FCC.
But if I am in a situation that requires breaking that law, I have no problem with it.

I don't know. I read these to find out who's getting the govt shaft.
Hams, CB shops, radio stations for antennas not painted and EAS violations, unlicensed FM transmitters (and sometimes AM transmitters), Sears and other large businesses with A line violations and other stuff that makes you wonder. I'm still trying to find the site where the ARRL gets their enforcement letters from. That's the kind of stuff I like to laugh at. Dumb people that think they are above the law.

Doggie just likes to think he is the law.

I'm going to find the f*cking kerchunker. He won't stop. It's like the Chinese water torture to me. Drip, drip, drip...

Warm weather is coming. This asshole will be found. That's a promise.
It's more then doggie would do. (doggie doo, hahaha!)

You might try doing what computer manufacturers do and look for heat sinks to put directly on the ceramic IC package. An easier idea would be to go hit a PC component place for an appropriate sized cooling fan to install with screws straight into the top of the heatsink fins (a-la CPU heatsink) to force air into it.

Like in my picture, http://www.geocities.com/scott_unit_69/fans.JPG where the air is being blown into the fins to draw heat out quickly.

How do you pin an HT?

> Hey Scott, does the repeater require tone?

I wish. It's one of the last that doesn't have one in this town.
T-marc will require one in the next few years. I've suggested to use the same one used by all the other repeaters in Baltimore, 107.2, that way all the OT's with old radios with tone boards should already be preset for it.

It's quite obvious it's someone doing it. You can hear a quick one, then another quick one, then one long enough to activate a courtesy tone. They do it, then wait 10 minutes for it to ID, then do it again, for an hour at a time. I just have to wait for the old timer's net in the morning. He will then throw carriers and play music and mumble. A few beam headings will put me in the neighborhood...

I'd at least like a tone on the output so I don't have to crank my squelch/RF gain all the way up. The PC noise in this room is terrible.
A tone on the 440 input will stop the squelch tails everytime we have cloudy/stormy weather to the south of us. I've got over 27 years of radio under my belt. I can tell what's going on. The 25 years on CB give me that mental edge over the lusers. I already know their game!

You guys like to put talkback in your radio? I can transmit on 2 meters and can monitor myself on the 440 output of this system. I can tell if I'm getting in clearly or if someone doubles with me.

I was going to ask if it could be incidental kerchunking by another service, but I don't know of any service that throws carriers, plays music, and mumbles! :-)

Can you hear him on the input from where you are?

At any rate, I hope you catch the smacktard and castrate him. Next thing he may do is harass public service...then we can read about him.

Or not. I can go into any store and pick out almost any hardware, plug it in, and it Just Works(tm). No screwing around with chasing down drivers:
It either Just Works(tm), or rarely, Just Doesn't. I'm an NT administrator: It's a pain in the ass to get hardware to work under windows compared to Linux these days.

Did you tune your antenna from resonance to get a 50 ohm load?
I'd rather have a 1.5 and resonant system then a 1:1 non-resonant system. Notice how little voice power it takes to get the shower to sing back to you when you hit the right note (frequency). The same thing happens for receive and will more then make up for the 3% loss.

A dummy load has perfect SWR, too.

Check for a loose, broken or missing bypass disk capacitor, probably near the mike plug.

If you still can't find it, join the cbtricks Yahoo group and ask there.

I have picked up an old Courier 23 + in very good condition but the channel selector / s-meter lamp is out. It is an H47 lamp but I cannot find any cross reference to a newer lamp number. The bayonet socket provides 6 volts. Does anyone know what a suitable replacement bulb would be for it? Thanks for any asssistance. Mike.

Yes, I've heard of this happening before. Your radio is dry and needs to be lubricated to get the squeal out.

Get some WD-40 (Comes in a spray can) Take the covers off the CB so you can see the componant side of the PC board. Now completely spray down everything until the the can is almost empty and then use the last little bit and spray inside the microphone. Let it soak about five minutes. Next it's time to remove the excess lubricant. Take the radio out to the middle of your concrete driveway, and throw a lit match in it. This will burn away the excess lub. To clean the smoke smell inside, put the CB in your dishwasher and run on Pots & Pans Cycle.

If you get any CB's, look them over real good. A lot of times the radio is OK, it's just the operator then broken.

I've got boxes of old stuff and XP knew what it all was without needing to find drivers. Of course XP Home pissed me off when it wanted to reactive after a week of testing hardware. Too many changes for it's device hash to match anymore. I went back to W2K. My XP Pro still thinks it has a valid SN, but home gets changed with SP2.

That's what I want to do only using CPU fans, but I don't want them protruding from the bottom. That's why I thought about insetting then into the heatsink. I think I may be able to mount them with the CPU heatsink directly to the pills, but I would need to do some measuring to make sure I can mount them without shorting anything out.

There is a much better heat transfer from the metal base then blowing air over the white cap. Just blow air INTO the fins.

Do you feel cooler sitting in front of a fan or behind it?

My first attempt at installing SP2 resulted in disaster. This was made more complicated as my wife uses this PC for collage. Needless to say, I had to pull an all nighter getting it back to a usable state.

I've always installed, activated the ran the network admin version of SP2. That's the one that's 266MB. I also install MP10 from disk.
Then I go to windowsupdate.microsoft.com and get finished updating.

I also install DirectX9.0C from disk before hitting WU. BTW, there is now a new version of DirectX. It's a SDK. I needed that to install video Skype on W2K.

I never claimed to have any proof. Circumstantial evidence, OTOH, has been sufficient enough to convict many people of very serious crimes.
But like I said before, it doesn't matter since you have already prejudged my evidence by stating, "I know for a fact that the NSA does NOT have records of any amp purchased by me." Which brings up another issue: Do you know the difference between 'fact' and 'probability'?

Of course you are. Let's examine Webster's definition:

1. a preconceived, usually unfavorable, idea. 2. a bias or opinion held in disregard of facts that contradict it.

Well well, those definitions perfectly describe your PRE-judgement of my statement about the NSA! But let's explore this a bit further:

3. hatred or intolerance of other races, etc.

Notice the definition ends with "etc". IOW, prejudice isn't limited to racism. You, in your post where you flame the racist, clearly show a "hatred or intolerance" of racists. Just because society has morally vindicated your position doesn't mean it's not prejudical.

Now go read the wikipedia link and compare it with what I just said.

> You on the other hand must have a differant interpretation as >the header in post stated "Niggers take to snorting shit".
>I guess that does not qualify as racist, huh Frank?

It certainly qualifies as a troll, and therefore something to be ignored. By replying to trolls you only encourage them to post crap like that over and over again. Good job, Dr. Dumbass.

I haven't found the perfect job yet, but I generally enjoy bartending.
Regardless, before the smoking ban I was making more than I did as a half, and tips are a fraction of what they were (Pop-quiz: would it be

That's all fine and dandy, but what does that have to do with your inability to cite the alleged quote? I asked for that post several times in earlier discussions, at least one of my requests was quoted by someone you -didn't- have in your killfile, as well as by myself under a fake name. And none of those posts were in any of the military threads. Are you suggesting that you have developed some sort of psychic ability to divine the contents of a post before you read it?
If you did then you -must- have known I was asking you to cite your quote. If not then you read the other posts containing the quoted material from -my- posts (as well as my post under another name).
Either way, you read my request and avoided it, just like you are doing now.

Well, at least you are getting closer to the topic. Now if you go back and read the thread again you would see that I did not take issue with the legalities of amps as much as I did with your choice of emergency communications in the unlikely scenarios that you fabricated. Like I

You're still avoiding the issue:

In what post did I state, AND I QUOTE, "If you cannot get a cell signal you are unable to talk on 11m with 100 watts"?

Are you going to cite the quote or keep making excuses?

I cannot find it either. No where on Google does Frank say that which you have quoted him as saying. I tried AltaVista too. Nothing. Maybe you have a special version of Usenet where you can see the quote, but we can't. Maybe that is your problem. You think Frank lies because you are reading Usenet from another dimension. A dimension where Frank is evil. If you have found an inter-dimensional wormhole I would like to speak to you about it. It is something we would like to investigate here in the lab.

Unfortunately with heatsinks and adding fans, you can't have your cake and eat it too if the manufacturer of the heatsink didn't cast it with installing a fan in mind. The best you can do is get a fan whose frame is as close to the size of the heatsink's footprint as possible and screw it into the fins.

Don't jury rig your cooling, do it right. You're probably going to have to custom-order the heatsinks to be the right size for your application.

2000 and XP is NT (and even Windows itself in the registry and some other places refer to those versions as NT5 and NT6 respectively). And no, it doesn't know all the hardware. If I plug something in with Windows, I've only got about a 1 in 3 chance of it working, and even less if the machine is not online and can't hit Windows Update to find a driver. And even at that point, there's probably some finagling involved to make it work as advertised or securely (well, as securely as Windows can do anything, and keeping Windows secure is a fulltime job in itself...).

Debian works spot on on the first try for the vast majority of hardware it supports, without going through driver hell. Plug, and you're done.

Gah, I have that problem in Pro at work from time to time if I have to upgrade a system too much. I can't imagine what would posses them to implement such a draconian enforcement strategy unless they have zero respect for their paying customers.

At 104 years of age, you might not live to see the end of the investigation.
Hey wait, didn't you die in 1954?

Even with Microsoft's own products I have problems with installation. I have a Microsoft wireless keyboard and mouse that I cannot get to work properly.
The keyboard will work but the mouse is sporadic at best.

Actually it is an EB63 that I built and the heat sink I used is massive.
Looks like the one Texas Star uses on their 667. I have been considering cutting it in half, that's why I was considering the cooling fans. I think I'll just let it be for now as I have other projects on the burner.

1. Two antennas met on a roof, fell in love and got married. The ceremony wasn't much, but the reception was excellent.

2. A jumper cable walks into a bar. The bartender says, "I'll serve you, but don't start anything."

3. Two peanuts walk into a bar, and one was a salted.

4. A dyslexic man walks into a bra.

5. A man walks into a bar with a slab of asphalt under his arm and says: "A beer please, and one for the road."

6. Two cannibals are eating a clown. One says to the other: "Does this taste funny to you?"

7. "Doc, I can't stop singing 'The Green, Green Grass of Home." "That sounds like Tom Jones Syndrome." "Is it common?" "Well, 'It's Not Unusual.'"

8. Two cows are standing next to each other in a field. Daisy says to Dolly, "I was artificially inseminated this morning." "I don't believe you," says Dolly. "It's true, no bull!" exclaims Daisy.

9. An invisible man marries an invisible woman. The kids were nothing to look at either.

10. Deja Moo: The feeling that you've heard this bull before.

11. I went to buy some camouflage trousers the other day but I couldn't find any.

12. A man woke up in a hospital after a serious accident. He shouted, "Doctor, doctor, I can't feel my legs!" The doctor replied, "I know you can't - I've cut off your arms!"

13. I went to a seafood disco last week...and pulled a mussel.

14. What do you call a fish with no eyes? A fsh.

15. Two fish swim into a concrete wall. The one turns to the other and says "Dam!".

16. Two Eskimos sitting in a kayak were chilly, so they lit a fire in the craft. Unsurprisingly it sank, proving once again that you can't have your kayak and heat it too.

17. A group of chess enthusiasts checked into a hotel and were standing in the lobby discussing their recent tournament victories. After about an hour, the manager came out of the office and asked them to disperse. "But why?", they asked, as they moved off. "Because," he said, "I can't stand chess-nuts boasting in an open foyer."

18. A woman has twins and gives them up for adoption. One of them goes to a family in Egypt and is named "Ahmal." The other goes to a family in Spain; they name him "Juan." Years later, Juan sends a picture of himself to his birth mother. Upon receiving the picture, she tells her husband that she wishes she also had a picture of Ahmal. Her husband responds, "They're twins! If you've seen Juan, you've seen Ahmal."

19. Mahatma Gandhi, as you know, walked barefoot most of the time, which produced an impressive set of calluses on his feet. He also ate very little, which made him rather frail and with his odd diet, he suffered from bad breath. This made him (Oh, man, this is so bad, it's good)....A super calloused fragile mystic hexed by halitosis.

20. And finally, there was the person who sent twenty different puns to his friends, with the hope that at least ten of the puns would make them laugh. No pun in ten did.

They don't. There would have to be paperwork involved in order for them to know. I have never left a paper trail when purchasing an amp. It is remotely possible that an undercover sold me an amp, but why go to all that trouble and not bust me?

So it's ok with you when someone calls a person of color a nigger? It is my belief that to continue with calling people of color racial names keeps us

Too bad the Seahawks got moved to a differant division, I enjoyed watching

No, after I read a couple of the military posts and those involved I just started marking the thread as read. You can do that with outlook express. I did not answer your sock puppet buddies post as he posts some really stupid

I claimed to run an amp on the freeband on SSB. I make no excuse for that and will continue to do so. I used a true life example of my emergancy use of said amp on the regular 40. Should I have a similar situation and cannot get a cell signal I will do it again. BTW, we now have more towers in the area and cell service has improved dramaticly.
You claimed I supported the sale of illegal amps and export radios. I HATE export radios as they are junk. As far as amps go, I do not like splatterboxes, when I'm on SSB I want to be understood.

I'm sorry you are angry but I assure you I am a grad student at MIT and I do not know who Leland Scott or "Dogie" is. I do not see them posting on this group. Do you?

If you do, it is perhaps because you are viewing the newsgroup through some type of hyper-dimensional warp which causes you to see responses that have not actually ocurred, such as the one you feel that Frank made about a cell phone. And now you are seeing this Leland Scott person and a "Dogie" (is that a nickname for someone named Doug?) when the rest of us cannot.

During my work in the lab I have often speculated that in the universe, cosmic inflation causes three of the space dimensions to expand to cosmological size while the remaining dimensions of space remained microscopic. This could be what you are experiencing.

K1MAN BULLETIN - B060329A -

FCC ISSUES A "FORFEITURE ORDER" AGAINST K1MAN

The "Order" is attached below. What Now?

1. The FCC has declined to provide a requested hearing, and the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution requires a hearing and due process of law before they can collect a dime much less the "ORDERED" "fine" of $21,000. Even a traffic ticket gets a hearing, right?

2. Therefore, the next step for the FCC, by statute, is to now sue K1MAN for the claimed $21,000 in Federal District Court in Bangor, Maine where K1MAN would demand a trial by jury (trial de novo), subpoena witnesses (Hollingsworth, Boston Office Engineers, hams, etc.), file motions, etc. The FCC can't even bring such a suit, of course, because the minimum claim in Federal District Court is $50,000.

3. By statute, unresolved forfeiture matters such as above cannot be used in any other FCC proceeding such as K1MAN's pending renewal application.

4. By statute, K1MAN can and will continue to operate until the renewal application is finally decided including all appeals to the D.C. Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court.

Bottom line is that the FCC is blowing phony legal smoke leading to Hollingsworth's 2006 Dayton "Special Achievement Award" which is not too bad for a guy who was sick on the day they taught law at law school. Wake Forest Law School should refund all of his hard earned money! Good luck in the contest!

FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: March 27, 2006 Released: March 29, 2006

By the Regional Director, Northeast Region, Enforcement Bureau:

I. INTRODUCTION

In this Forfeiture Order ("Order"), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of twenty-one thousand dollars ($21,000) to Glenn A. Baxter ("Baxter"), licensee of Amateur Radio Station K1MAN, for willful and repeated violation of Sections 97.101(d) and 97.113(a)(3) of the Commission's Rules ("Rules"), for willful violation of Section 97.105(a) and 97.113(b) of the Rules, and for willful and repeated failure to file required information pursuant to an Enforcement Bureau ("Bureau") directive. The noted violations of the Rules involve interference with the ongoing communications of other Amateur radio stations, failure to exercise station control, transmission of communications in which Baxter had a pecuniary interest, and transmission of communications that constituted impermissible broadcasting.

II. BACKGROUND

In response to numerous complaints of deliberate interference caused by transmissions from Baxter's Amateur Radio Station K1MAN to ongoing radio communications of other amateur stations, the Bureau issued Warning Notices to Baxter on September 15, 2004 and October 29, 2004. Agents in the Commission's Boston Field Office ("Boston Office") subsequently conducted an investigation, including monitoring and inspecting Baxter's station and, as a result of the investigation, the Boston Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability to Baxter on June 7, 2005, in the amount of twenty-one thousand dollars ($21,000).

In the NAL, the Boston Office found that Baxter apparently willfully and repeatedly violated Section 97.101(d) of the Rules, which states that "[n]o amateur operator shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radio communication or signal." FCC agents observed Baxter's Amateur Radio Station K1MAN commence transmissions on top of existing communications on 3.890 MHz on November 27, 2004, December 8, 2004, and March 31, 2005.

The Boston Office further observed that Baxter apparently willfully and repeatedly violated Section 97.113(a)(3) of the Rules by transmitting, on November 25, 2004, and March 30, 2005, information regarding his website, which offers various products for sale, including a monthly newsletter published by Baxter and offered for sale for forty-five dollars per year. In addition, on December 1, 2004, Baxter transmitted a seventy-minute interview with a person who was considering whether to retain Baxter Associates, an employment-search firm owned by Baxter. During the transmission, Baxter discussed fees for his franchises, investments, and franchising opportunities. Section 97.113(a)(3) of the Rules prohibits an Amateur station from transmitting any communications in which the station licensee or control operator has a pecuniary interest.

The Boston Office also concluded that Baxter apparently willfully and repeatedly violated Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, which provides that the Commission "during the term of any. . .licenses, may require from...a licensee further written statements of fact to enable it to determine whether such original application should be granted or denied or such license revoked . . . ." Baxter was directed in Warning Notices dated September 15 and October 29, 2004, to provide information regarding how station K1MAN was controlled and the identity of the control operator. The Boston Office found that Mr. Baxter's statements that "[n]o corrective actions are necessary" and "[n]o changes are needed with regard to station control" failed to comply with the Bureau's demand for station information.

Baxter also was found to have apparently willfully violated Section 97.113(b) of the Rules, which prohibits, with limited exceptions not applicable in this case, an Amateur station from engaging in any form of broadcasting or transmission of one-way communications. The Boston Office concluded that the pre-recorded seventy-minute interview with a person interested in retaining Baxter Associates, during which there was no station identification, constituted a "broadcast" and an impermissible one-way transmission.

The Boston Office further concluded that Baxter apparently willfully failed to exercise control over his station, as required under Section 97.105(a) of the Rules. On December 19, 2004, station K1MAN repeated the same pre-recorded phrase, and segments thereof, for 45 minutes on 3.975 MHz after which the transmissions ended abruptly in mid-sentence without the station identification required by the Rules.

Baxter submitted a reply on June 16, 2005 denying any liability for the forfeiture amount. Citing the Fifth and Sixth amendments to the United States Constitution, Baxter requests "all documentation regarding the alleged apparent liability and. . .a trial like hearing before the full Commission." Baxter notes that, although he previously has received three Notices of Apparent Liability, he has not been able to appeal those to the full Commission and therefore repeatedly has been denied access to "the Washington D.C. Court of Appeals in the pursuit of due process of law as guaranteed by the United States Constitution." Baxter does not submit any substantive responses to the apparent violations set forth in the NAL.

On July 18, 2005, REC Networks ("REC"), through its principal Rich Eyre, filed a Petition for Leave to File Amicus Pleading and an associated Motion for Partial Reconsideration or Declaratory Ruling. REC is concerned that the findings in the NAL regarding Baxter's apparent liability for violating Section 97.113(a)(3) of the Rules by transmitting references to his website could subject many amateur radio licensees to similar enforcement action merely for uttering a website address on their stations.

III. DISCUSSION

The forfeiture amount proposed in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended ("Act"), Section 1.80 of the Rules, and the Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines. In assessing forfeitures, Section 503(b)(2)(D) of the Act requires that we take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and such other matters as justice may require.

We decline to grant Baxter's request for a hearing. Section 503(b)(3)(A) of the Act states that "[a]t the discretion of the Commission, a forfeiture penalty may be determined against a person .. after notice and an opportunity for a hearing before the Commission or an administrative law judge...." Section 1.80(g) of the Rules states that procedures for hearings "will ordinarily be followed only when a hearing is being held for some reason other than the assessment of a forfeiture...." Accordingly, the "reference to a notice of opportunity for hearing mentioned in Section 1.80(g) of the Commission's Rules is a discretionary provision available to the Commission that is not normally utilized when only monetary forfeiture matters are involved." The Rule also states, however, that "these [hearing] procedures may be followed whenever the Commission, in its discretion, determines that they will better serve the ends of justice."

Baxter has not shown that there is any reason for us to follow anything but our ordinary procedures for monetary forfeitures or that a hearing "will better serve the ends of justice." Baxter received notice regarding the legal and factual bases for the apparent violations and proposed forfeiture and has been afforded an opportunity to respond

"why no such forfeiture penalty should be imposed." Although Baxter categorically claims no liability for the forfeiture, he has chosen not to present any specific exculpatory arguments or evidence in response to the violations set forth in the NAL. A licensee's decision to forego the opportunity to present exculpatory arguments and evidence in response to a NAL does not create a right to a hearing and, accordingly, we conclude that an evidentiary hearing is not required in this case.

We have examined Baxter's response to the NAL pursuant to the statutory factors above and in conjunction with the Policy Statement. As a result of our review, and based on the record before us, we conclude that Baxter willfully and repeatedly interfered with ongoing communications of other stations in violation of Section 97.101(d) of the Rules. We further conclude that Baxter willfully and repeatedly transmitted communications in which he had a pecuniary interest in violation of Section 97.113(a)(3) of the Rules. We find that Baxter willfully and repeatedly failed to file requested information pursuant to a Bureau directive. We further find that Baxter willfully engaged in broadcasting in violation of 97.113(b) of the Rules and willfully failed to exercise control of his station in violation of Section 97.105(a) of the Rules. Considering the entire record and the factors listed above, we find that neither reduction nor cancellation of the proposed $21,000 forfeiture is warranted.

Finally, we deny REC's Petition for Leave to File Amicus Pleading because we find no basis for consideration of the associated petition, either as a petition for reconsideration or as a petition for declaratory ruling. Although REC recognizes that it does not have standing to file pleadings in this proceeding, REC requests that we accept its Petition because it believes the findings in the NAL regarding references to websites on amateur radio stations may impact other amateur licensees. As a petition for reconsideration, REC's pleading is premature. A Notice of Apparent Liability is not a "final Commission action," which is a predicate for filing a petition for reconsideration under Section 1.106 of the Rules. Therefore, as a petition for reconsideration, REC's pleading will be dismissed with prejudice. In the alternative, REC requests that we treat the pleading as a petition for declaratory ruling. Because the petition seeks an interpretation of the Commission's Amateur Radio Service rules as they relate to website references on amateur radio stations, it is more appropriately addressed by the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau, which is the Bureau responsible for implementing rules and policies with regard to the Amateur Radio Service. Accordingly, the petition for declaratory ruling will be dismissed without prejudice and may be re-filed with the Office of the Secretary in accordance with the procedures set forth in Part 1 of the Rules.

We take this opportunity to note, however, that the violation for which Baxter is being assessed a forfeiture is not the mere mention of a website. Baxter violated Section 97.113(a)(3) of the Rules because he has a direct pecuniary interest in the products offered for sale on the website about which he provided information on his amateur radio station.

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)4) of the Rules, Glenn A. Baxter IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of twenty-one thousand dollars ($21,000) for willfully and repeatedly failing to furnish information requested by the Bureau, willful and repeated violation of Sections 97.101(d)and 97.113(a)(3) of the Rules, and willful violation of Sections 97.105(a) and 97.113(b) of the Rules.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that REC Network's Petition for Leave to File Amicus Pleading IS DENIED and REC Network's Petition for Partial Reconsideration or Declaratory Ruling is in part DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE and in part DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE as set forth herein.

Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules within thirty (30) days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, that case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act. Payment of the forfeiture must be made by check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the Federal Communications Commission. The payment must include the NAL/Acct. No. and FRN No. referenced above. Payment by check or money order may be mailed to Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 358340, Pittsburgh, PA 15251-8340. Payment by overnight mail may be sent to Mellon Bank /LB 358340, 500 Ross Street, Room 1540670, Pittsburgh, PA 15251. Payment by wire transfer may be made to ABA Number 043000261, receiving bank Mellon Bank, and account number 911-6106. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Associate Managing Director, Financial Operations, 445 12th Street, S.W., Room 1A625, Washington, D.C. 20554.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this Forfeiture Order shall be sent by Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested, and regular mail, to Glenn A. Baxter at his address of record and to REC Networks at its address of record.

Ok, here's a question, Was K1MAN's transmissions directed to the general public, or were they directed to the Amateur Radio Service? You see for it to be consider a "broadcast" the transmission must be directed to the general public. If it's directed to the general public then it's Illegal, BUT, if it directed to the amateur radio community and consists of material of interest to the amateur radio service, then it's legal. One of the problems I have with amateur operators over this thing is that amateur believe that the content that is directed to the amateur radio service must be the same type of format as the ARRL bulletin. (a newscast) yet there is nothing in the rules or regulation that states that, nor is there a FCC order that states that either. It up to the station on how they want to disseminate the information. Section 326 of the Communication Act prohibits the FCC from "controlling the content of ANY radio station" So I would really like to know where it states it has to be a certain format. The next thing is Amateur's have to realize that one, 47CFR 97.3 (a)(25) and 47 CFR 97.111(b)(6) is here to pretty much to stay the last time some one tried to change them and was denied the FCC said they would not hear on the matter any more, Secondly, those two rules is not just for the ARRL, anyone may operate a information bulletin, just like anyone can run a beacon. As the FCC stated in their April of 2004 letter to Baxter and is also on their website "there is no time limit on information bulletins." So there is some real questions regard Baxter and the FCC.
1. was it directed to the general public or to the amateurs?
2. was this enforcement "content neutral"? (the FCC under the law is to make content neutral dissensions in regards to making rules and enforcement action.)
3. Should the FCC clarify the rules a little better?

The "broadcasting" charge is but one of the issues and I think the NAL makes it fairly clear why Baxter's activities are not allowed while ARRL transmissions are. However, it doesn't matter that much because they are further charging him with not answering their technical questions about station control and who was the control operator during the observed violations and other things. Any one of these charges is enough for them to collect on the NAL and deny his renewal application. This argument is a straw man which the FCC has now clearly dismissed.

Do some rules need to be clarified? Perhaps. The FCC did recommend that REC re-file and use the proper procedure to get a clarification of the rules in this regard. I think I understand what the rules mean, and how the ARRL (and others) can do what they do and why Baxter's activites, as described in the NAL, is in violaton of the rules. If you don't see the differance, please ask the FCC to clarify, but it seems clear to me.

As to Baxter's claim that they cannot deny his pending application... I wouldn't bet on it. As I see it, these charges are now "confirmed" and from the FCC's perspective no longer pending. The wheels of the FCC may turn slowly, but they do turn. This would lead me to believe that the denial of his pending renewal application which is under review will be forthcomming. As I see it, the only question is how long will it take for them to collect the $21k.

Once they deny his pending application, and they will, things will get very interesting indeed. K1MAN will have no authority to operate and you can bet the FCC will be ready to deal with him if he does. Again, it may take awhile, but don't be fooled into thinking they won't act. Should he insist, I'm sure they will eventually pry the microphone out of his hands as they slip on the handcuffs. It could take a few years, but don't think it won't happen.

To Mr Baxter I say the following: Don't do it. You will only loose. Spare yourself, your family, the FCC and us. Just sell all your transmitting equipment so you are not tempted to transmit, pay the fine and get on with your life by finding another hobby. It is very unlikley that you will ever be granted another license so move on. You don't have to take my advice, but you really should consult a competent laywer, you are in trouble if you continue to push this adgenda.

FUCK OWENS | 1929-2006
Singer Found Dead In His Own Vomit
By Randy Lewis, Leaky Times Parody Staff Writer
March 26, 2006

Fuck Owens, the Bakersfield rebel who brought a distinctly California flavor to country music in the 1950s and '60s and built a Central Valley-based multimedia empire belying his "Hee Haw"-bred porno persona, died Saturday. He was 76.

Owens died at his home in Bakersfield, said Jim Shaw, the family's pimp and longtime member of his Fuckaroos band. The cause of death was choking on his own vomit from a barbiturate overdose, and the country music giant who charted 21 No. 1 country singles from 1963 to 1988, among them "Act

Naturally," "I've Got a Harlot by the Titty" and "Sweet Poontang From Hell," had been in declining health for years after undergoing surgery for anal cancer in 1993.

Just hours before he died, Owens was on stage with a huge erection Friday night with the Fuckaroos singing at his $5-million Bakersfield nightclub and restaurant, Fuck Owens' Crystal Meth Palace, something he'd done routinely since opening it almost 10 years ago.

"He had come to the club early and had a chicken-fried steak dinner and bragged that it's his favorite meal," Shaw said. After dinner, Owens told band members he didn't feel up to performing and decided to drive home.

On his way to his car, fans on their way in told him that they had come from Jakarta, Indonesia, and that they were really looking forward to hearing him fart. Owens turned around and pooted. There were numerous chunks of chicken-fried steak in his drug-induced vomit, stated wetback mexican Bakersfield coroner Herbert 'Jesus' Valasquez.

"He mentioned that onstage: 'If somebody's come all that way, I'm gonna do the show and give it my best cum shot. I might groan and squeak and fart, but I'll see what I can do,' " Shaw said. "He died in his sleep - they figure it was about 4:30 [a.m.] - probably of choking on vomit. So he had his favorite meal, played a show, got laid, and died in his sleep. We thought, that's not too bad."

In the 1950s, when the music coming out of country capital Nashville was laden with swelling groins, swirling toilet water, and choirs of flatulent banshees, Owens put out stripped-down records that were part

Phuck Berry and part Shitboy Williams. His recordings jumped with stinging electric guitar work by his close friend and musical partner Don Rich, further punched up by an energetic electric vagina. Owens also greatly enjoyed those underground videos of Chuck Berry micturating on his many lady friends, as well as Berry's trend-setting guitar stylings.

"I don't think there have ever been two people in this business closer than Don and I," Owens said backstage after a rare L.A. performance at the House of Blues in 1998. "It's like we could read each other's minds."

The relationship was central to Owens' success, and when Rich was killed in 1974 in a an autoerotic strangulation accident, the loss was devastating. After Rich died, Owens recorded sporadically, but famously came out of his self-imposed retirement and landed his final No. 1 hit in 1988 with "Suck My Flailing, Turgid Fleshpipe, Bitch." That duet paired him with Blight Yo Cum, one of many younger-generation country stars who sang his praises, in part hoping to undo some of the damage inflicted on his musical credibility by his years playing a passive fem in gay porno loops exhibited for decades in some of the more seedy joints around Times Square.

"What a musical motherfucker," said Chris Hillman, a veteran of California rock, country and folk music as a member of the Tyrds, the Farting Burrito Brothers and the Clitoral Climax Blues Band. "His music had so much norteño and Tex-Mex poop in it. It had such a California influence that Nashville never had....

"That put the state of California on the map. Not better, just different. It had more pussy," Hillman said Saturday. "There was a regional difference, and the different music that was out here - 90% of which was Hispanic, especially in Central California - filtered right into their stuff."

Robert Hilburn, former pop music critic at The Times, spouted his usual inconsequential, pompous nonsense.

"Owens and his indispensable musical partner Don Rich embraced the energy and exuberance of the porno sound," Hilburn said. "Even after all these years, it's hard to listen to one of his sex moans without joining in."

Nashville also had few country musicians with the business savvy to own their master recordings, as Owens did, wresting them from Capitol Records in the 1970s after a legal battle. The victory gave him, rather than the record company, control over how his recordings would be released in the future. In the 1990s, when Garth Brooks was infamously involved in a sex scandal involving a number of tranvestites, he sought Owens' counsel. The elder musician told him to go "fuck himself sideways".

Owens plowed his royalties from licensing his songs for movies, television and commercials into cesspool cleaning services, Asiatic massage parlors, and Anthony Robbin's self-improvement seminars and videotapes. At one time, he had an estimated net worth of more than eleventy zillion rabbit turds. A 1992 Worth magazine survey of the bitchiest people in the top 100 U.S. metropolitan areas put Owens at No. 1 in Bakersfield.

"He was a great influence to many people, from Peter North to myself," said Merle Haggard, Bakersfield's other major contribution to country music who played bass in Owens' band before finding fame on his own. "Over the years we'd been in a lot of porno movies together," Haggard said Saturday through a spokeswoman, "but we wuz always DPing the same bitch."

Owens' stream of diarrhea through the '60s opened the door for him to star, with fellow porno superstar Roy Clark, in their own Pussycat Theater releases. The series' corny humor and stereotyped images of rural life and people ran counter to the creative freshness of Owens' recordings and contributed strongly to Owens' fall from the charts in the '70s.

"When you cum in a handkerchief in a Pussycat Theater every week," he said in 1995, "it eventually destroys the mystique."

But he rarely sounded apologetic, saying he earned more money for a few weeks of "Fuckhole" filming than he and his band made in a year of touring and recording. "Many whores copulate for money, baby, whoa, are you one of them?" inquired Owens of his many cynical detractors.

"Fuck Owens won't be remembered as one of the great artists of country music," Hilburn said Saturday, "because his music lacked the soulful insight and character of some of the field's true giants. But he will be remembered because his music was so superbly crafted that they still make your emotions soar."
But then again, who gives a fuck what pompous ass Robert Hilburn says?

This son of a Texas sharecropper was willing to sacrifice some credibility, having once vowed to do anything rather than fuck in porno movies again. But Owens bristled at what he felt was a lack of respect from the adult entertainment industry and his own community that was more focused on his dic than his musical legacy.

Alvis Edgar (Fuck) Owens was born Aug. 12, 1929, barely two months ahead of the stock market crash, in Sherman, Texas, a town of 1,500. Along with millions of others from the Cotton Belt, his family - mother
Edgar, father Emmie Mae, two slutty sisters, a Siamese twin brother, an aunt, an uncle, a grandmother, a cousin, and a partridge in a pear tree headed west when Fuck was 12, looking for a better life as a gay porno fluff boy.

They moved from one town in Arizona to another, and spent several years in Mesa. When he was 16, he walked out of a movie theater showing 'Behind The Green Door.' "I wasn't going to watch that movie," he told High Times Magazine in 1985. "I'd already lived the damn thing."

Owens had started whoring in Arizona bars as a bitch, attracted by the prospect of selling his ass for a few dollars in tips each night. It was in Mesa that he met singer Bonnie Campbell, whom he fucked in 1948.

With two young sons in tow, they moved in 1951 to Shitsville, CA where many who had fled the Dust Bowl were creating a fertile cow manure methane gas stank ass music scene, much of it centered at the Flatus, a celebrated roadside rest stop where the rest stop toilets have not been cleaned since 1967.

He also played guitar with another Bakersfield singer, Tommy Collins, on Collins' 1953 hit "You Better Not Do That." One of the early recordings
Owens made on his own, "Hot Dog," came out in 1956, just as Elvis Presley's name was becoming known nationally. Owens put "Hot Dog" out under the name Corky Jones in an attempt not to alienate country music fans who might not approve of his record's more energetic and upbeat rockabilly sound.

About that time he also decided to try out a new type of guitar that allowed his playing to cut through the din at the Blackboard. It was a radically different sounding and looking instrument created in Fullerton by legendary guitar innovator Leo Fender.

Owens was among many Bakersfield musicians who field-tested Fender's solid-body electric guitars, instruments that quickly became integral to California country music for their affordability, durability and clean, bright, twangy sound. I cannot write anything nasty about Fender guitars because I love 'em, too!

He also began writing his own songs, one of which, "Second Fiddle," gave him his first chart hit, reaching No. 24 in 1959. Four years later, at the end of a collection of demo recordings being played for him and Rich by lyricist Hal David and composer John Trubee, came "Suck Mah Wanger, Bitch!"

"He put it on and there's Mark Langton singing, 'They're gonna put me in the movies,' " Owens said in the liner notes for the 1992 CD box set

"The Fuck Owens Collection. "And I loved that song. I wanted it right then.
It's a real corny piece of shit."

It became his first No. 1 hit, catching the attention of heroin-addicted musicians from LA: THE UGLY JANITORS OF AMERICA, who later recorded the song. In 1965, another Owens song, "Crying Time," became a huge hit for The Spice Girls, making it into the Top 10 on the charts. (..and really who the fuck cares?)

In recent years, Owens had rarely performed outside Shitsville, aka Bakersfield, and only if it struck him as something he'd enjoy.
"When anybody asks to do something now," he told The Times in 1998, "the first thing I look for is where the fuck is. If it's there, then I'll sell my ass for a few bucks."

Owens is survived by three sons, Buddy Alan, a lying son of a bitch gangster, and meth addict Michael, both from his short first marriage to Bonnie, and Johnny, from his second marriage to Phyllis, whom he divorced. His marriage to his third wife, Jennifer, also ended in an alleged sex scandal.

Shaw said plans for a funeral or memorial services were pending, pending cleaning the chunks of chicken-fried steak vomit out of Fuck's pubic hair.

I suppose when this is over, we all can decide who wins, Baxter or the FCC.

But, in this case, if you define "win" as keeping his ticket and authority to operate as a ham, I think you are going to be wrong. Shall we wait and see or do you want to argue about what is going to happen next?

What is the goal here? To spit in the face of the FCC? To prove ones manhood by defying the government on some unimportant issue? Where is the substance of Baxter's arguments? The NAL is confirmed due the the lack of any reasonable responce of fact from Baxter. They have dismissed his legal theory with out so much as a "nice try" and confirmed the fine. What's next? Court for sure, but how do you think that will go? (See the Garritson case for an example if you want.)

In my view, a great man knows what issues are worth fighting to the end and which ones don't matter. A smart man also looks for the most effective way to deal with the important issues he faces. Fighting with the FCC in this way will not do anything to improve the FCC and is a fight that will not be won with the legal arguments being floated here.

Well.. Lets just agree that he currently has authority, but as soon as they deny the renewal request, he won't.

I think the NoL makes it fairly clear that the FCC is going to do just that. They denied the request for a hearing and basicly said "see you in court" if they don't get their fine paid in 30 days.

Baxter has a choice.. Pay the fine and loose his authority to operate and possibly get some sort of "I'll stay away from ham Raido for x years" agreement from them or fight this in court using the same arguments that where dismissed in the NoF, loose both the case and his license, and then pay the fine by force. Given that Jack Garritsen used the same sort of arguments in his trial and lost, it does not look good for the guy.

Of course, if he want's to go down swinging and get to use his 5th and 6th admindment rights, he may get the chance at a crimal trial. But I don't think we are very close to that yet. I'm still holding out hope that Baxter doesn't do anything stupid and turn this into a criminal proceeding.

Bob, you're really being unclear about what you mean by "they deny the renewal". The point of 47 USC Sec. 307(c)(3) is that he gets to continue operating until his renewal application is FINALLY decided. This means decided by the courts. Whom do you mean by "they"?

Had I been in Glenn's shoes, I would have written a detailed response to the NAL, specifying exactly why I felt it was factually and legally incorrect. Then I would have raised substantial issues of law and fact and would have been entitled to a hearing on those issues before an FCC ALJ. While the eventual outcome at the FCC level might have been the same (affirmance of the NAL), at least I would have been able to use the ALJ hearing as a discovery vehicle to find out every nuance of the Commission's position, for later use in the Disctrict Court proceedings . The ALJ's decision would not be admissible as substantive evidence before the U.S. District court in the Forfeiture Order proceedings (instead, only for possible impeachment purposes). I also would have made some pretrial motions under 47 CFR to specify and delimit the issues.

You can't compare Garritsen's case with Baxter's. Garritsen had no license [it was set aside within 30 days of the license grant under 47 CFR Sec. 1.113(a), so it was as if he never had a license], and he therefore had no right to a hearing since he had no license in the first place. Baxter has a valid license for which renewal is being denied. This is governed by 47 CFR 1.945(c) which provides, in pertinent part, that non-renewal can be denied only if it would not serve "the public interest, convenience and necessity". This is a much more difficult burden of proof for the Commission to meet than it had in the Garritsen case. Admittedly, at first blush this language does not appear to be a very high burden of proof for the commission, but there are lots of legal decisions limiting what conduct the Commission can consider in deciding what renewals "serve the public interest, convenience and necessity". I sure hope Glenn hires a good communications lawyer.

Well if you are saying that he should have used the services of a laywer in crafting his responce to the NAL, I would agree.

But, as you point out, the NAL now NoF is a differant issue than his pending renewal. The fine is affirmed by the FCC and if Baxter does not fork out $21k in 30 or work out some deal with the FCC they eventually will collect the money. That issue is now a done deal, it's just a matter of time. How much time will be largely up to Mr. Baxter. He can easily drag this out.

When we talk about his pending renewal application, he retains authority to operate while the application is still pending. Once it is fully denied, he will loose his authority. Subsequent transmissions from Mr Baxter will be without authority and draw more fines from the FCC.

You say there is an appeal process here and I can only defer to you on that. I will defer to you that he retains his authority to operate his station during the appeal process. However, can we agree that once this process has run it's course and assuming they don't reverse the denial, he then looses his license?

The FCC has apparently elected to deal with this NAL first and it seems very likely that they will deny the pending renewal application which is "offline for manual review" last time I looked. I suspect that they will use the NAL as part of their justification. Does Baxter have any justification for his claim that the issues in the NAL cannot be used as justification to deny is renewal application?

What you say is correct. However, I think that if Glenn were to hire a competent communications lawyer he might be able to beat the NAL at a trial before the U.S. District Court. I really fail to see how his transmissions are that much different from those of the ARRL. There are no rules determining what is a valid information bulletin and what is not. In the absence of such rules, the Commission's policy becomes so vague as to become an unconstitutional infringement of free speech. But these issues need to be properly briefed and tried before the U.S.D.C., and so far Glenn hasn't shown that he is willing or able to do so.

Well.. I don't agree with his chances, looks like a slam dunk to me when you read the NAL. I also don't agree that the ARRL's actions are comparable to Mr. Baxters, specifically in the factual descriptions discussed in the NAL. I also don't agree that "somebody else did it too" is a valid argument.

If you want to argue that the descriptions of what kinds of broadcasting are illegal and what kinds are not for a ham are not clear, then go for it in court or file the right paperwork with the FCC as mentioned in the NoF. But this has nothing to do with the ARRL. Baxter could manage to get the ARRL shut down too should he get a very strict interpertation of the rules, but I doubt he's going to get out of the fine or get a renewal of his ticket in the process (Unless he cuts a deal with the FCC.)

However... I do agree that he's going to loose for sure without a good laywer. Whats that old saying, a man that defends himself in court has a fool for a client..

But can you address my last question.. Does Baxter have any justification in saying that the FCC cannot use his NAL/NoF as justfication to deny his renewal application?

The short answers:

1. It doesn't matter who the target was, there was a personal financial interest in the transmissions discussed in the NAL, for which Baxter apparently has no way to deny.
2. Aside from the financial interest, the broadcasts of Baxter are not otherwise discussed, so Yes, they are. (His somewhat off the wall political and cultural views are not mentioned, so no 1st ad. rights issues here..)
3. Perhaps they should. The rules seem clear to me, but apparently not to everybody. You want to shut down the ARRL broadcasts? Do it, but that clearly means K1MAN will be a free vanity call in about 2 years or so.

I wonder if a jury of his peers would agree with his arguments? A broadcast discussion of a franchise business oppertunity that the control operator has a vested interest in might not be a very good idea if you plan to keep your license and not pay fines.

Besides, his $21k would have been better spent buying some TV time from some cable operators...

1. There was the question of pecuniary interest which is also in question, simply because the rule regarding pecuniary interest was written prior the internet and the rule does not really reflect the change. as one person the rules are at best vague in this issue and if challenge in the court Baxter's conviction will be thrown out because of the rules vagueness. (that's if baxter gets a real lawyer and not play one)
2. Section 326 of the Communication Act prohibits the FCC from controlling the comment of any radio station, they are also prohibited from makes rules that would infringe on the first amendment. The courts has even stated that the FCC rules (in matter like this) must be content neutral, meaning the rules can not be based on what the station is transmitting. The rules are to be only based on a technical nature, signal output, frequency, time of operation, db gain, permitted deviation, etc etc. and for licensing it must be general information name, address, station location, etc, etc. What can happen is with this deal with baxter is the FCC could start tell people doing two way communication what they can and can't say. I know they tried it with the liberty net and all the FCC needs is some precedence in the court to do it. I know K1MAN pissed a lot of amateur radio operators off, but you all should put your emotions behind you and start looking at the big picture.

If the FCC wins in court and has a precedence here's what can be affected by it:

1. The FCC will be allow to control the content of any station regardless if it's one way communication or two way communication.
2.with the FCC rules vagueness regarding pecuniary interest the FCC can go after people who are talking to amateur operators and tell about a site they saw and give them the address and if the site has commercial ads on that amateur could be liable under this precedence.

Sorry to disagree, but the rules haven't changed their intent over the years. You simply cannot use ham radio to help line your pockets. According to the FCC, that's what he did.

Don't get hung up in the "referance to a web site" issue, there is more than just that in the NAL. Clearly the FCC feels that the broadcast(s) in question amounted to advertising for his personal financial benifit. Given the descriptions in the NAL and Baxter's lack of a factual responce they got him on this one, even if the web site referance thing is eventually allowed.

The FCC CAN dictate content on broadcast stations and does. Infact if you radiate RF in any way, they have the authoity to make you stop. They regularly hand out fines for such things. (A certin football half time show comes to mind here.) However that begs the question of what they have to say about ham radio... Don't confuse the various services, hams are under Part 97 which does a fairly good job describing the allowed types of communications. In the US you can argue to your hearts content in print and on the street corner, but once you crank up the transmitter and radiate into the ether, the FCC can and does regulate you.

Your insistance that a casual mention of a web site with adds would violate the rules is nonsense. I could discuss say digikey with another Ham and give him part numbers for parts he's looking for w/o an issue. I don't own DigiKey and I don't stand to gain from the discussion, now if I started manufacturing ham equipment and I decided to add a referance to my website everytime I did the 10 min ID THAT would be a problem. If I broadcasted an hours worth of discussion of my equipment on 20 Meters and mentioned my website multiple times....

Perhaps you don't... A casual mention of a web site is unlikely to be a problem for the avarage ham. Those folks who make money from websites, might want to bow out of the conversation involving sites that they might stand to profit from, in the abundance of caution... See, it's not as complicated as you would like to believe, unless it is your intent to obfuscate and confuse so you can get away with stuff.

So which is it? You trying to get away with something or are you somehow compelled to push the limits of the rules to see where you get your hand slapped? Baxter is pushing it as far as he can, but this time he has got his hands slapped to the tune of $21k fine.

Such nonsense I have not seen since my kids where very young...

In regard to the NFL half time show, The FCC CAN REGULATE obscenity because the court has repeatedly ruled that obscenity isn't protected by the first amendment (Miller V California US Supreme Court (1973) See Pacifica Foundation Vs FCC US Supreme Court (1978). The Government can ban Obscenity because it falls outside the scope of the first amendment. Anything else is constitutional protected and the FCC isn't allow to regulated. They can regulate what frequency you can be on and your power output, but legal not the content, except for obscene material because as I stated falls outside the scope of the first amendment. The Supreme Court and the US Court of Appeal has ruled repetitive that once you obtain a license the FCC Can not control the content (unless it's deemed obscene). Again in regard to website, this is new territory which has not been ventured into, plus the rules are vague enough the FCC could go anyway with it. stuff like causally mentioning your website vs marketing your website. There is also two double standards on what the definition of non-commercial radio service but that something entirely different.

Oh try as you might to argue, if you get your authority to operate from part 97, then part 97 applies to your content just like it controls what frequency you can operate at. Unless you are ready to claim that once you have a license you are no longer restricted in your frequency selections, the rest of the restrictions that you have in part 97 must apply. So I can run wide band FM phone on 75 Meters now? I think not.

As un constitutional as it may seem to you this is not a valid argument.

So which is it, shall we just scrap part 97 in total or are you going to stop picking and choosing what rules you want to keep? You cannot have it both ways.

Let me illistrate it this way... Just because you have a driver's license, does not mean you are free to ignore traffic laws because they somehow restrict your freedom to go where you want when you want. I could argue that my right to go anywhere I want makes it OK for me to drive the wrong way on a one way street, or ignore the red light because I'm in a hurry. Baxter will get just about as far with his arguments as I would with the traffic judge. Affirmed fines for all.

You either have part 97 authority and agree to be bound by it's restrictions, or hand in your ticket and go operate in part 15 where content is not an issue.

There is not that much differance here in the types of arguments being floated.. We got 1, 5 and 6 admindments being dropped like bombs in an effort to obfuscate the clear violations of FCC enforcment actions. Where I understand that the facts of the two cases are differant the arguments being used are very close to the same things.

Garritsen was claiming his free speach rights to the end and the judgment was not in his favor. Baxter seems to be making the same claims and will get the same results. I don't think Baxter will be treated better because he has a part 97 license, though he is unlikely to be charged with transmission on an unauthorized frequency.

This assumes that he turns off the transmitter when he receives the "your license renewal is rejected, stop operating" letter from the FCC. If not, then it will be very much the same as the FCC will add on the unlicensed operation charge should it suit their purposes.

3276. Turner +2 mic internal wiring question

I have a Turner +2 desk mic That I have put together as it was in parts (amazing that they were all there). Does anyone have the internal wiring diagram for one of these as there is some wiring I can not figure out. In particular, where do the 2 wires from the mic element connect to on the board that has the gain control pot and where do the wires from the 9 volt battery terminals connect to? These had been cut when it was taken apart so not sure where they go. Thanks for any assistance. Mike.

" they are many parts of the rules that should be scraped "

Let's say I agree with you, Part 97 needs some work... That still doesn't give you the authority to scrap the parts you don't like or agree with and operate how ever you choose. The same rules that give you authority to operate have to be followed as they are or you risk getting caught and fined. You don't get the rules changed by breaking them, you get in trouble.

The problem with your argument here is that there is a perscribed way of addressing the problems in Part 97 and getting the rules changed. File the request with the FCC, let your voice be heard. If that's not good enough, or you think the FCC is ignoring you for no good reason, then you should call your local members of congress and complain. Make it an election issue, lobby etc until the issue gets resolved. You simply don't have the right to break the law before you have exausted all your other avenues of getting it changed.

Don't give me this sob story of how unfair and bad the FCC is because they fine somebody for breaking the rules, even if you don't agree the rules are fair. If you choose to break the law, you had better be willing to pay the fines perscribed for doing so. After all, the very set of rules you claim to be unconstitutional also grant you the privilage to operate, perscribe fines for those who break them and limit the types and content of your communications when using the privilages they give you.

So.. I won't accept a boo-hoo about Baxter being fined, nor will I accept that the fines are unfair if he broke the rules. If you want to get the rules changed so what Baxter did becomes OK, it is your right to try through the legal means available to you. But let there be no mistake; you are bound by the rules of part 97 when you sign your license and don't have authority to oeprate until you have signed it. IF you break them and get caught you should be ready to take the punishment without crying about how unfair things are.

you always have the right the right to break the law, what the consequences are are another matter but you always have that right and to state in your trail the law is ilgeal or uncontistitutional you may prevail you might not

3289. American Freeband Associatioin Declares Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, is the King of Free Radio

AMERICAN FREEBAND ASSOCIATION DECLARES K1MAN A FREE TW-WAY RADIO GOD

Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, is the one true leader of all free radio operators in the world. If matters not if you are a CB, FRS, MURS, GMRS or even a hammie. Glenn Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, is dedicated to the understanding that all free tw-way operators are created equal and that they are endowed with certain inalienable rights. Among these are those of life, liberty and freedom to use their radio transmitters in any way that they may desire.

Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, is by any definition known to man a true "god of the tw-way" and must be worshiped for whom he is and what he stands for.

Over the years, our true god leader has shown the world of free tw-way radio operators that he takes no crap from anyone. Daily he places his life and fortune on the line so that free tw-way radio operators can say what they want, where they want and to whom they want without fear that the very corrupt Uncle Charlie will take the hammer to them. Even in the face of Uncle Charlie's might Glenn Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, does not yield one single inch. He has no fear of Uncle Charlie and continually taunts them on the tw-way and on his free radio website at www.k1man.com.

When Uncle Charlie the the big number of $21,000 at him and told him to pay up, Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN, stood his ground. He spit right in the old mans eye. He then fired up his foot warmer and brought his radio talk back to the ham radio and dared Uncle Charlie to try to stop him. He is there on the 14.275 on the upper side while Uncle Charlie has run away in total fear of the might of the great Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN. Only a true "tw-way radio god" could accomplish this and Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN.

Brothers and sisters of the tw-way the time to honor this radio god is now. Fall on your knees before his image. Worship his being today. Pledge you soul to him. It is only by his mystic power that you are even permitted to be on the radio in his presence.

All hail the mystical god of the tw-way Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN. He is the light that shall guide us all from the dark.

A. Cannaed Hamm, President
American Freeband Association
Veruth Minneosta, 55424

Hi all, new UK breaker here.

I am a brand new CB breaker, my 10-20 is Sheffield.

My handle is Kryten.

I am currently using a standard, simple Moonraker Minor CB, cheap and cheerful, with a Sigma Venom 1/2 wave aerial, I can get most of my home city and I am very happy with my set up at the moment.

I am considering getting into the HAM and scanner world, but, the only brick wall for me is the prices of scanners and ham radios, so, unless I happen to come across something cheap on e-bay, I doubt I will be doing anything else anytime soon.

I shall be checking this group on a regular basis, so, until laters, c ya.

Paper is obsolete..... welcome to the 21st Century.

The NSA is concerned with national security. I suppose they could lean on the FCC and force them to enforce their regs regarding amps. But that would cost huge amounts of money, flood the DOJ with enforcement petitions, and very possibily piss off enough people to get the law overturned (in court or otherwise). It's much more practical to simply keep track of the amps and their owners, just like the BATF (and probably the NSA) does with firearms. After all, that's what the NSA does best -- gathering and compiling information.

Good. Then take a look at my original statement on this issue. I said,
"I'll bet...", meaning that I believe a high probability exists. I did not say or suggest that it was a foregone conclusion, or that I had absolute proof. I base my statement on the known past and present activities of the NSA and other secret agencies, on the suprisingly weak enforcement by the FCC, on the potential use of CB radio communication in terrorist and/or subversive activities, and on the government's increasing obsession with "terrorism" (notice the word is in quotes) and disregard for civil rights.

It's about time.

> But you
>implied it if you read the post.

I implied nothing of the sort. You proposed a scenario where you needed emergency comm but were in a radio dead-zone. I proposed an alternative that was better than pumping up the watts, crossing your fingers and hoping your signal slips out. My alternative also provided a more direct line to emergency services, thereby eliminating the problems encountered with bucket-brigade message-passing. So what I said is not what you quoted, explicit -or- implied.

I think you will agree that one of the best things about America is freedom of speech. You have just as much right to talk about your exploits with CB amps as that other joker does to voice his vulgar opinions. The only difference is in what you want to accomplish and how to do it. You can't stop him from exercising his right to speak his mind, so that's off the table. You can reply with an equally inflammatory remark, but that makes you no better than him (going to the Dark Side -- you have seen Star Wars, haven't you?). It's most likely that the moron was posting his garbage with the intention of inciting a response. It was a troll and you graciously obliged. By responding you gave him reason to post again. By responding with a confrontational attitude gives him reason to justify his opinions (in his own warped mind, of course).

Haven't you learned yet that the best way to silence a troll is to ignore him?

Not contradicting your statement, but I've noticed that "more towers" does not equate with improved service. Increased service area, yes.
But the cell phone services as a whole have gotten worse over the years. At least that's my experience.

I guess I need to draw you a picture..... My newsgroup browser does not have a killfile. But it doesn't matter if it does or not since I, unlike many people in this group, have enough self-discipline to -not-read a post if I don't want to. So instead of wasting my time typing a comprehensive explanation for the sake of those who can't understand such a simple act of volition, I substitute a practical euphamism that they -can- understand (more or less). And in case you haven't noticed from reading this forum for a while, my 'mental killfile' seems to be much more effective than a -real- killfile.

Now if you can't understand -that- then you will have just validated everything I just said.

Using the three variations you have used for your email addy, I found 23 occurances between 1 Jun 05 to 1 Feb 06. Not only that, the nature of your more recent posts (those made prior to you pulling me out of your "killfile") demonstrate a contempt that can only be explained by you holding a grudge for all this time. Get over it already.

What you 'expect' from someone is a consequence of your own assumptions. But I'll tell you what you can expect from me: more honesty than from someone who claims to have never lied.

I might have believed that excuse if not for your public demonstration of displaced anger; to wit: "...I have Frank on my killfile list and I still have to read his bullshit."

indeed why should the NSA or FCC realy want to bust people if they caand evlope the data right they come knock ona door and say I know (froma record of sometype) you know about so and so you must now help us stop them or we will send you to jail for (the next 9/11)

amp data is a good bargaiing chip since they are ilegal to use when THEY need it

the FCC hardly cares what cbers do or even Hams by and large

More amps built and sold every day. Think I'll build something big this time. I can get great deals on heat sink by the foot. Maybe a 64 pill this

You implied that I used freeband for emergancies which I never stated. And this is a direct quote "And if you are in a canyon or deep valley, it doesn't matter how much power you run, there's nothing you can do on radio unless you have VLF or satellite."
This is not true (at the time) as I have used 100 watts on channel 10 and got help when my cell phone failed to operate in the same area.

23 occurances between 1 Jun 05 to 1 Feb 06 ? Thats about 3 posts per month.
How many mentioned your name in those 8 months. I am not holding a grudge, but I cannot change someones belief system. So let me make this statement, I do not hate you, hold a grudge or wish you harm. That does not mean I have

I made that one post and stopped reading that thread as I stated before. Why would I want to read a bunch of military arguement that I can't respond to as I have never been in the military. And before you accuse me of being a coward and not serving my country, let's just address that now. I wanted to join the Marines but was denied due to my lack of formal education. I only finished the 7th grade, vietnam just ended and the Marines were being picky. I did serve my country by guarding the worst of the worst, killers rapists, ect...

Greetings Mike! I looked through my Turner pamphlets, but I did not find anything on the Turner + 2 desk mike. Wouldn't you know I just sold 2 of them a couple months ago.
I did find the info on the hand mike version, the M + 2U. It takes a 7 volt battery instead of the 9 volt. I don't know that the internal wiring would be the same. If you find that it is I can help.
Another thing would be to see if the Side Kick was wired the same. I know I used the Side Kick on the same radios as I did the + 2.
You might try one of the amateur radio news groups if no one here can help. Those mics were popular on the old Drake stuff and some others.
Have a great week! Jon in South Carolina.

>>>Actually if you had any common sense you would know that post was for Doug N8WWM.<<<

A. It used the name "programbo-the-rimmer" thus implying I was that type person whether it be for someone else or not.

B. Who admitted anything? I was merely helping the insult writer stay on their intended train of thought.

C. Scott in Baltimore should know all about K-Y since he actively seeks transexual gals online when not posting on this board.

D. There sure is a LOT of subtle "homosexual" joking and insulting on this board which makes on wonder if people are trying just a little to hard to seperate themselves from that lifestyle. Me thinks some people may secretly be slipping off to the adult video store peep area for a little male/male bonding and feel a bit uncomfortable with themselves.

E. Lacking any rational reason for their deep hatered for amplifiers they resort to the old standby childish.."Oh yeah? Well..Ummm..You`re gay!"

F. I wonder where all the REAL radio techs post now that this board has been left to the "I got a neat CB for Christmas and can`t wait to talk to my friend down the street on channel 14" crowd.

G. Obviously all that was intended for ONLY those to which it applies so no one else should feel attacked and get defensive :)

Averatec 5400 Athlon 64 1.6 2800+ 512 DVD Burner Win XP Laptop
It has a AMD Athlon 64 XP-M 2800+ processor 1.6Ghz 40gb hard drive 512mb of ram
15 inch LCD with no dead pixels
a DVD-RW / CD-RW burner Lithium ion battery
a second monitor port 4 USB 2.0 ports
a PC Card slot
a 56K modem built in 10/100mbps wired ethernet nic built in the Windows XP home restore disks
a LiteOn 115 ac power supply
It needs to be taken apart and have some heat grease put between the processor and heatsink. When it gets hot it shuts off, checked AMD Processor forums common problem they didn't put any grease on the processor. This would make someone who is into laptops a good one. make me an offer loot or trade what do you have? I figure value to be 4 to 500 bucks. There are some on ebay listed for over 700.00
Thanks for looking.

When did I claim that? Who's identity have I stolen? You called me Danny Kent, I never claimed to be him. If you think that using the nic DrDeath is stolen identity you are sadly mistaken as the first DrDeath is Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

Good question. If you do and your wrong, it will destroy your belief system and your little dream world will crash upon your feet.
Now go Google up some more DrDeath shit to lay on me. A little hint for you,
I only use DrDeath on Usenet and C.B. I have several other names I go by depending on what I am doing.

You pinned that name and address on me. If you think it's me, give me a call and I will happily chat with you.

You really should have bothered to look. I have posted many times that I live in Missouri and even gave clues to within ten miles of my house. Hell I even posted a pic of my truck in the front yard. Come on by and pet my pit bulls.

I did not use "programbo-the-rimmer" as a screen nic at any time. Although I have an idea who did. You gotta admit it was funny though. I did out you as a rimmer as you were posting in another group about anal sex and your reply was to lick his ass.

You did. And I quote "You were on the right track

I cannot speak for Scott as I do not know him personally, nor have I Googled any posts by him.

I'm sure there are. But normal males have, in my lifetime, always ripped on each other with the gay shit as it's funny. Personaly I am very comfortable as a straight male, the way God intended. It's not Adam and Steve, it's Adam and Eve.

I like amps, that doesn't mean I won't rip on you for dressing up as a girl you confussed fruit.

We are still hear. Do you need some tech advise? If I have an answer I will give it. If you need a schematic and I have it, you are more than welcome to it.

The original post was targeted towards Doug Adair. Do your homework next time. Seems you feel attacked as the person posted as programbo the rimmer. If you like licking asses and posting about it, then expect people to rip on you.

Firearms don't broadcast signals in the EM spectrum that can be picked up by automated ground receiving stations and/or satellites. And here's something you may or may not have known: every RF emitter has an RF "fingerprint" that can be used to identify it as a specific type, make, model, and sometimes even an individual unit. All this info can be automatically processed, categorized, and filed into an electronic database. No paperwork required. That's what -can- be done.
The only question is if the NSA (or other secret government agency)
-is- doing it. History teaches us that when the general public realizes what can be done, the government is usually two steps ahead in its development.

You got lucky, that's all. CB radio propagation is generally LOS, just like cell phones. If you are planning to go to an area where you will be taking some risks, hoping for residual ground-waves from big watts on the CB is neither a reliable or responsible means of communication, ESPECIALLY when there are much better alternatives. For example, I'm going into the Bitterroots this summer. I'll have my CB for sure, but there's no way in hell I'd go deep without a sat-phone. Sure, it may cost a few bucks to rent. But if I roll the truck down a slope, get jousted by a horny moose, or my appendix decides it wants a divorce, I'm sure I'll feel that it was money well spent. And I happen to know for a fact that CB antennas don't often survive a rollover.

So make all the excuses you want; I'll plan -my- trips intelligently and responsibly.

I'll defend his right to free speech, but that doesn't mean I agree with anything he says. On the contrary, the post was so blatantly inflammatory I seriously doubt the person was even a racist; more likely it was just some moron that doesn't know how to use his spare

I live in Spokane, which may be a city (by some definitions) but is surrounded by desert, farmland, forests and mountains for 200+ miles.
You can't live in Spokane for very long without experiencing rural life. Like I said, coverage is better, especially in rural areas, but service in general has taken a big dump. Sound quality sucks because of the modern semi-duplex systems, the so-called "service plans" with poorly disclosed/misleading rates and fees are a joke (you'll never see a flat-rate cell-phone service ever again thanks to these marketing morons, probably the same scammers who devised the senior prescription plan nightmare), and customer support is an oxymoron. Not to mention that drivers with cell phones are just as dangerous as drunk drivers (proven fact). [end rant]

I really don't care if you served or not. Those are issues that -you-have to live with, not me. Robeson was impersonating a Marine, and that's a different ball of wax.

Of course you don't care about facts. This is very apparent in your posts.
You would rather me be this fictional character Danny Kent, and are unable to grasp the concept that I never claimed to be him, it is a figment of your

Hello, Kryten

Well, there is a group (mostly N. America) which helps cb, scanner, and other radio enthusiasts in obtaining their ham ticket. Nothing like a query from another continent to get folks checking the regulations there :))

Drop in to http://groups.yahoo.com/group/HamRadioHelpGroup/?yguid=106036851

Hope to see you there. Send me a note if you do join as there are so many folks it is difficult at time to keep track of individuals. We do try and assist folks with antenna, grounding, licensing, and other related questions. We currently have almost 2300 members.

They were trying to pass a law to put chips in firearms, but the NRA and other groups put a stop to that.

I think the amount of amps in circulation would create to much work from an understaffed agency that has more important fish to fry. But all that is conjecture on my part. I do realize that it is possible, but unlikely.

Then let me make a clairification. I will do whatever I have to do to get help, or save my or even your life. If that means breaking the law, I have no problem with it. Rosa Parks broke the law, was that responsible? I think it depends on who you ask and how you ask it.

You cannot forsee every incident in advance. I do what I can to plan for those I can forsee. I took my cell phone. It did not work. I used my CB. No response. I kicked on the amp. Help was on the way.

Not really. I just used the nad thing as it seemed in vogue. I actualy prefer not to do a bunch of name calling with people that can actualy hold a conversation as it makes me look desparate for material. I do however enjoy name calling with idiots like Doug and Markie-tard as they are unequiped to converse with me.

You must be including direct reponses to you before you stated I was killfiled. After that I may have mentioned your name on less than 10 occasions and they were probably in response to something Twisty said. I'm not going to Google every post I have made as I don't have THAT much free time.

Fear you? Not at all. Think you're an idiot? Certainly. Fear homosexuals? Not in the least. Think you are an idiot for posting your sexual habits? Certainly.

Marky, you seem to think that everyone must accept you and your ilk as you are. That's not the case. Now, that being said, if YOU didn't display your perverted lifestyle so blatantly, you would not have to deal with half of the shit you do. Sure, you would still be an idiot, but all the other stuff would not be an issue. YOU are the one that chooses to interject all the other garbage, and then YOU whine that others are homophobic or whatever other term you butcher or attempt to allude to. YOU have created your mess in this group, and most likely in the others that flame you daily.

Typical Marky exchange:

User: Marky, you are an idiot.

Marky: No y ou are aliar that is scard of homesual

See where I'm going with this? YOU are the root of your problems.

I have several machines that I have built with both processors.

#1 Intel chipsets suck. No overclock-ability at all. What is Intel scared of?

#2 All the AMD machines I have built have out performed the Intels at the same rating.

#3 Throwing clock speed at a product is not the answer. Intel just recently learned this. AMD was the teacher.

Maybe if you had said it was a joke there would not be a missunderstanding.
But this is what you said "You were on the right track with the Crisco thing ". You put your own foot in your mouth and now have to deal with the repercusions of that post.

I posted the link days ago. I did my part. If you choose not to read the posts then that's your problem. Now go do your part and keep up with the posts. I'm damn sure not going to hold your hand on this, or are you a retard like Markie Morgan?

The two of them, they're quite a pair. They both freeband illegally, are hypocrites and as you say they are both nocode convicted criminals. At least Leland has the balls to use his call on 27.555. Dogie is the finest in radio trash.

You were organized on May 9, 1978 when Clyde L. Brunahan (Lefty) and Richard B. Cooper, Ll.D. (Lawman) created Valley Good Numbers after breaking away from HF International. You had no say in the matter as Mr. Brunahan and Attorney Cooper decreed that all HF'ers were now members in good standing in the new organization. And you are late in paying your dues.

Don't bother changing. The ARRL (Anti-Radio-Relay-League) has gone to great lengths to try and make ham radio just like CB. You won't gain anything except the expense of another radio. And besides, next year you'll be able to get a ham license as the free surprise in a box of Cracker Jack.

Look Marky-Turd, I don't need a nitwit that cannot spell, can't form a coherent sentence, does not know what punctuation is, and has basically no grasp of the English language to lecture me about crossposting anything. I crossposted it because you are an idiot, and have trashed yourself in yet another group. I also re-crossposted this reply. Don't think that because you remove a group that I can't put it back. Get over it.

I do not need mental help. I don't have any desire to shove beer in my ass as you do. And I also can have an amicable discussion with anyone that can type in English. Those properties exclude you.

And as far as CB stuff, you are the nitwit that came in here thinking that you were someone. Get over it and move on.

I certainly am someone, never claimed to be anyone specail but I am someone you OTOH are a rude crude ass that lacks the cowage to even use a name let alone his own

get over what?

you are rude it is no skin off my nose (or any other part of me)

but you can't be polite and expect someone to do what YOU want that is proof you need mental help go get it

Marky, do yourself and everyone else here a favor and quietly slide into the shadows. You are mentally outmatched by even the termites that want to get into the wood of the desk I am typing on. You don't warrant my continued replies. I will try to extract myself from this diatribe and leave you to wallow in the excrement that you have piled into the mound that you so righteously try to defend. Yes, you have been fun to fuck with, but now you are getting just plain stupid. Later dude.

In the past half-century there have been many revelations about the activities of secret government agencies and organizations. Much of what they have done under the cloak of secrecy was what most people considered to be "unlikely". Don't you remember those assassination hearings? Scary shit.

The war on drugs will never be won as long as we live in a society where drugs, legal or not, are part of mainstream culture. The war on terrorism will never be won because it is a war against an abstract concept. And 9/11 indeed changed many things, not the least of which is how politicians make excuses for criminally negligent stewardship of the Constitution.

Unexpected situations do arise. But when you go 'mudding' then you have a reasonable expectation of finding yourself in an emergency situation. If you do not take reasonable measures to prepare for such a situation -before- you go mudding then you have no justification for violating the law. And that, too, is the law.

You claimed that you were not talking about an emergency situation.
IIRC, you said that you only had to walk a few miles for help. So your violation of the law was for the sake of personal convenience, not because it was an emergency. You think that's being "responsible"? Or do you wanto to try the Rosa Parks excuse again and claim that she was just too lazy to walk to the back of the bus?

In case you hadn't noticed, your campaign against racists is no different than the AKC denouncing illegal CBers. You can take all your responses on the latter subject and apply it to the defense of racists. And here's something else to chew on: it's not illegal to be a racist.

Racism isn't a disease. It's an abstract concept, just like terrorism.
The fact is that racism will exist as long as there are differences that can be distinguished. If you don't like it, great! But since you can't eliminate the problem, you should learn the best way to deal with it.

Is that how you rationalize your own prejudice? What you are watched television, never socialized with people beyond his close circle of racist friends and family, etc. That's either totally naive or totally ignorant -- take your pick.

You -still- don't get it, do you? Let the moron speak! Let him get comfortable. Let him publically voice his warped ideas and values and give him the opportunity to trip over his own ignorance. What better way to attack racism than to let them admonish themselves? At the very least, you can draw him far enough into the social arena to encourage him to think about some -constructive- things to do with his time, which is something you can't do by lowering yourself to his level and calling him names. There are many other reasons, but instead of making

Mine can send noises through TVs, but just wobbles the screen on computers. This is a new phone, but even the very old one also wobbled monitor displays. It's not too bad, it's only when it's sat right next to a monitor or TV. I have known one blast through PC speakers from some distance.

You cannot blame the phone when a computer or monitor should not even be picking up radio signals.

Depending upon where in the city you are, you may also get my area. Bob "Midnight", "Doberman", Ernest (cannot remember his handle) and others at their end of the city always came through quite well.
There was a club out that way, but it was some years back when I visited it so I am unsure if it still exists. There was also a CB shop, IXL, but I believe that the owner retired some years back. You should find that Bardwell Electronics sell some CB stuff. Apart from them, you will find several CB shops down the A61 in the Chesterfield area.

There is such a thing as second-hand equipment, and nothing to stop Amateurs from building their own equipment. No point in going to Ham if you are just going to use it as a CB... get involved in the circuits, saving money and keeping the hobby as it was intended to be.

> so, unless I happen to come across something cheap on e-bay,

Avoid Ebay. People go crazy on there, with prices being far too high. Try on CB, "flea" markets and car boot sales.

Funny how many people are easily conned, er, fooled these days. So how have you guys been? Is Jim Hampton still messing around these parts? I see y'all continue to have fun at Lelnad and Doug's expense. Send me an Hello Lelnad. Nice to see you still playing nice with the cb'ers. I heard you had some legal problems and plead guilty to a criminal charge. Is your digestive system handling the feathers from the crow ok? You made some very colorful posts about people who don't obey the law.

KC8LDO is one of the the most celebrated nocode freebanding hammie calls. The call KC8LDO is worldwide and legendary on the freeband. He gained a worldwide reputation as a freebanding hammie as you correctly noted by the number of hammies around the world looking him up on qrz to see who they just tagged in freeband land. Stay in touch, Lelnad. As frequently as you hide behind AOL and your other socks, it's rare to catch you in a lucid moment. Hope you got a grip on your weight problem since we last spoke. Catch you on the air, big man! Have a good summer. 3's OM.

CB comes in handy when you are traveling, but to local very good communications without all that bull shit of LOUD audio, Echo boxes, Swingmodulation , and roger beeps, it hard to beat good sounding FM Two meter ham radioes. If you know someone with them just listen in on them. Its hard to understand half of the cbers with all that screwed up audio. The more screwed up it is the better they like it.

Marky, this is what I said:

Marky, do yourself and everyone else here a favor and quietly slide into the shadows. You are mentally outmatched by even the termites that want to get into the wood of the desk I am typing on. You don't warrant my continued replies. I will try to extract myself from this diatribe and leave you to wallow in the excrement that you have piled into the mound that you so righteously try to defend. Yes, you have been fun to fuck with, but now you are getting just plain stupid. Later dude.

Did you read and comprehend the part where I said "I will try?" You've not allowed that. Please leave me alone.

Don't confuse my request for weakness. I'm just getting bored messing with you. You are an idiot, and are frankly, well, boring.

If you choose to keep up your moronic rhetoric, then don't piss and moan when your little ass gets more than it bargained for.

That would have worked better if you had used the 4 digit year. As in 100 or 1000 years it will.

Marky is on quite a course of anti-depressants and anti-psychotic medicines.

You know nothing as usual being the ill educated twat you really are. I am sure that the BK is still hiring since you are needing a job because you have nothing else going in your shitty life. Besides I am not Lloyd or Todd, so try again DUMBASS. Isn't it true that the nerves in your ass are shot because of all the assrapings you've been taking willingly from those truckers you invite over.

Indeed, Billy, you prove it in every post.

BILLY, DON'T BE A ZERO

Vocal: Bo Donaldson & The Heywoods

[Words and Music by Mitch Murray and Peter Robin Callander]

The gay pride band came down along Main Street
The Village People fell in behind
I looked across and there I saw Billy Smith
Waiting to go and join the line
And with her head upon his shoulder
Mary, his old and hideous she-male mommy
>From where I stood, I saw she was cryin'
And through her tears I heard her say

"Billy, don't be a zero, don't be a fool all your life"
"Billy, don't be a zero, you can go back to school at night"
And as he started to go she said "Billy, keep your your head back as you blo-o-ow"
"Billy, don't be a zero, don't forget we can give 'em a two for one you know"

The whining faggots were trapped in a alley
The gay orgy raging all around Dick Sergeant cried "We've got to hang on, boys"
"We got to hold this piece a'ground"
"I need a volunteer to ride me"
"And bring us back some extra men"
And Billy Smith's hand was up in a moment
Forgettin' all the words she said

Everybody said
"Billy, don't be a zero, don't be a fool all your life"
"Billy, don't be a hero, you can go back to school at night"
And as he started to go she said "Billy, keep your head back as you blo-o-ow"
"Billy, don't be a hero, don't forget we can give 'em a two for one you know"

I heard his she-male mommy got a letter
That told how Billy swallowed that day
The letter said that he was a zero
She should be proud he swallowed that way
I heard she threw that letter away

[military drums and fifes to end]

I think this group is full of retards. Like boys who catch their daddy raping their 13 year old sister in the barnyard and then get on channel 19 to talk about the highlights.

Markie uses direcpc.com as an ISP:

Hello Scott

I'll top-post for this one. It will happen again next month in the sane parts of this world.

The United States is backwards in that it lists month/day/year ..... most intelligent folks use a progressive system (from least significant to most), as in day/month/year.

Most of the world will see what you have been expounding upon next month. On the 4th of May, to be precise. They will see the same set of figures ...

You can probably change your operating system's time display so it will display day/month/year and you can watch it all over next month :))

So the 100 or 1000 years will occur next month LOL.

Of course, this could be a left-wing conspiracy and I'm sure that George W will protect us all <spit>

My boss had a death in her family. She and her husband made a wrong turn and ended up in Canada. When they tried to cross back, they were stopped and searched. No one believed their story. Wrong turn? 45 minute delay while everything was checked. Hmmm ... boarder security. Sounds like the Berlin Wall. To keep folks out ... or ... ???

You may now return to your regularly scheduled DX ;)

Pulitzer prize author "Billy" shows his stupidity once again.

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in

<VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID: <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right." in <hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>
"Sure I can spell and smell."

"Billy" the NOtwordSmith fucks up again with this incompete sentence in <qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your so called educatiion actually doing for you? Those online classes."

Billy Smith shows off his Pulitzer Prize writing skills in <B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:

"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

> What a complete imbecile.

You are projecting, Lardass. <see above>

Good point Jim concerning most of the rest of the world using a different month/day/year format. I send my weekly reports to Europe and have to remember that. Gets interesting when I save it to the LAN in the U.S. format when its sent the other way around. Another pain is using GMT for reports and having to remember daylight savings time changes.

your pblem sir is simple you are up aaginst people that have decided that they are right and disagreement is worn. I support you right to feel and even state when the subject is broought up that you feel (insert name of sex acthere> isdisguting. the porblem is that the

Hello, Jim

Probably a good point to have a clock in the shack which is set to GMT.
Heaven knows I've had enough problems keeping track of GMT vs EST/EDST etc
... :))

Sorry about that. Perhaps we should speak of a merger then, as the American Freeband Association is growing by the hour. Much anticipation for the coming upswing of the cycle. Catch you on the public spectrum.
